White House Parley Called Today; Taxes Likely Topic

Harrison and Doughton Speed to the Capital for Conference.

Roosevelt Is Silent On Aim of Meeting

By Felix Bruner.

President Roosevelt has summoned to the White House for an important conference at 8:45 a. m. today Senator Pat Harrison and Representative Robert L. Doughton, chairmen, respectively, of the Senate and House committees that handle tax and tariff measures. While the subject of the discussion has been withheld, there was immediate speculation that the talk might revolve about one of three topics:

1. Possible reduction, by Presidential order, of tariffs on certain farm products, supplies of which in this country have been seriously reduced by the drought.

2. Confusion brought about in business circles by the new tax law, provisions of which have been variously interpreted by tax experts, and the possibility that the committee heads might make clear what Congress intended.

3. A possible statement of policy, for the reassurance of business generally on future taxation.

Leaves Hot Primary.

Senator Harrison (Democrat), Mississippi, the Finance Committee chairman, left a hot primary campaign to fly to Washington for the meeting. He professed not to know why he had been summoned. Representative Doughton, head of the Ways and Means Committee, left his North Carolina home immediately for Washington.

President Roosevelt plans to leave immediately after the conference for an inspection of the Pennsylvania and New York flood area and for visits to Cleveland and to Chautauqua, N. Y. Later he will make a tour of the drought area.

The White House was uncommunicative. The fact that the two leaders, whose jobs are to steer tax legislation through Congress, had been summoned was learned elsewhere. It was admitted they had been called for an "important conference."

With the next session of Congress still nearly five months in the future, it was not considered likely that the two leaders had been called to discuss legislation to be considered then, although it was possible that there might be discussion of issuing some statement of policy concerning future taxation.

As recently as last Sunday the Department of Commerce, in its World Economic Review, called for removal of "uncertainties prevailing in connection with future taxation and other budgetary problems, as an aid to business recovery.

May Touch on Tax Angle.

Then there was the possibility that the talk will have to do with the tangled situation which has resulted from the tax bill enacted in the last session of Congress. Business men have complained that many provisions of the measure taxing undistributed surpluses are so confusing that even their experts do not know what they mean. The two members of Congress possibly could throw some light on the intention of Congress in enacting the measure.

President Roosevelt has on a number of occasions indicated that he expected to call a conference on the subject of co-ordination of Federal and State taxation. Some time ago he said that he expected to call such a conference some time this winter. It was considered possible that he might wish to talk with the Congressional leaders on that subject before conferring with Governors in the course of his impending trips.

Speculation also concerned the

Prince Mike Romanoff Leaves Virginia Estate for Broadway

Abandons Royal Rural Splendor Despite His Love of Farming.

By a Staff Correspondent.

The Prince, whose real name is supposed to be Harry F. Gerguson, has lived in what he was fond of describing as royal splendor on the 300-acre estate of John Walters, New York broker, for the last 16 months.

He came here as a caretaker. He told the neighbors that his name was John Adams and for months his identity as one of the world's famous imposters was not discovered. He made friends with neighboring farmers and he continued to be friends with them even after his "real" identity was discovered.

Prince Mike's imperial palace was one of the little brick houses on the farm. He did his own cooking and he looked after the imperial cows and the imperial chickens. Everything always is imperial with Mike.

Strangely enough, the "prince" is a capable farmer. Perhaps that lends credence to the story that he is originally from Iowa. Last Christmas his employer asked him what he wanted for a gift.

"A tractor," said his imperial highness.

A tractor, it was, and Mike was more pleased than if it had been a car a block long. It was his most prized possession.

Occasionally during his stay here Mike has changed his overalls for city clothes and, swinging his walking stick, he has made jaunty visits to friends in Washington or Richmond. But he never stayed away long from the farm.

Now he is going back to Broadway and he says he is going soon to Hollywood to work in the moving pictures. He wouldn't say why he was returning to New York. Mike doesn't like reporters and photographers. He says they "exploit" him.

Mike Romanoff, the hard working

Astor Diary To Be Sealed; Suit Is Settled

Agreement Announced by Lawyers; Picture Colony Relieved.

By the United Press.

Los Angeles, Aug. 12.—Mary Astor, weary and wan-faced from a ten-day ordeal in court, returned tonight to her Toluca Lake home, having traded a lavender diary for her child.

The actress settled her bitter court feud with her former husband, Dr. Franklyn Thorpe, in an agreement approved by the court, details of which will not be made public until tomorrow.

However, authentic reports from conference rooms, where perspiring attorneys bickered throughout a sweltering day to reach an agreement, indicated this compromise:

Miss Astor will get part-time custody of 4-year-old Marylyn Thorpe, whose legal custody she surrendered to her husband when he divorced her in April, 1935.

She will lose her desperate fight to repossess the "tell all" diary in which she potted down romantic reminiscences which involved some of the film colony's notables.

Notables Involved.

Destination of the memoirs was not divulged, but it is known Miss Astor would not agree to her former mate keeping the book, and Dr. Thorpe insisted the actress be prevented from destroying her diary. It was understood that as a compromise it will be impounded in secret archives of the court, safe from prying eyes.

Thus the film colony's bitterest court feud in years—involving such figures as John Barrymore and George S. Kaufman, noted playwright, who ducked out of sight when the diary was opened in court—passed today into the limbo of the gone but not forgotten.

Judge Goodwin Knight, who struggled through two days to bring the litigant parties into line, announced after court adjourned today that terms of the agreement had been approved by Judge Douglas L. Edmonds and would be made public "shortly after noon tomorrow."

He said the settlement "fully protects the interests of little Marylyn, Mary Astor, Dr. Thorpe and everyone else connected with the case."

"Disposition of the diary will be handled in a way entirely satisfactory to all parties concerned," Judge Knight said.

Diary Held Not Issue.

Joseph Anderson, Dr. Thorpe's attorney, announced the settlement shortly after Judge Goodwin Knight recessed court for the second time today, until tomorrow morning.

Roland Rich Woolley, Miss Astor's lawyer, who handled the child-custody row of Actress Ann Harding, confirmed Anderson's statement.

"A tentative basis for agreement has been reached," he said. "It is only a question of working out details. I can safely say, however, that the diary is no longer an issue."

The leather-bound volume in which the actress penned in lavender ink accounts of romantic interludes in the film colony was the stumbling block over which lawyers fought feverishly for two days.

Miss Astor wanted her "tell all" book of memoirs returned to her. Dr. Thorpe, who through his lawyers had released long passages of the document to the press, wanted to keep it as a club over his wife's head.

While newspapermen and photographers waited in the stuffy courtroom, rival lawyers—Anderson for Dr. Thorpe and Woolley for the wan-faced actress—bustled in and out of conferences.

Judge Knight called them into

Rebels Begin Madrid Drive As Two Cities Are Captured

Fascist Victories Isolate Seaport

Copyright, 1936, by the United Press.

Northern Rebel Headquarters, Burgus, Spain, Aug. 12.—Gen. Emilio Mola, northern insurgent commander, today began his long-heralded offensive on Madrid.

Rejoicing over rebel successes in the south, which were featured by the capture of the City of Badajoz, and jubilant because northern insurgents occupied Toosa, thereby isolating the loyalist seaport of San Sebastian, Mola ordered his columns concentrated in the Guadarrama Mountains north of Madrid to advance against the capital.

Tolosa fell after all-night fighting in the city's twisted streets. The Red defenders fled at dawn, leaving 50 dead and abandoning large stores of arms and ammunition. Many loyalists were taken prisoners.

Main Highway Open.

Capture of Tolosa put the rebels astride the main highway from San Sebastian to interior Spain. It put them in a position to make a final assault on San Sebastian, which for a month has been the scene of heavy fighting.

The victorious forces in Tolosa hoisted Fascist and Monarchist flags and established an impressive military headquarters.

As columns, composed of rebel regulars, Fascists and monarchists from Pamplona, commanded by Cols. Cayuela and Latorre, marched through the streets, the frightened populace hung nationalist and royalist flags from balconies. Women sewed the flags last night in secret after it had become apparent the loyalist defenders would be unable to hold the city.

Meanwhile, Mola's headquarters here announced that columns commanded by Gen. Francisco Franco, supreme insurgent commander, were battering their way to Madrid through the south.

Northern forces operating behind the main offensive moved from Galicia to secure the rebel rear. They occupied the towns of Trevia and Leitariegos in Austrias.

Rebels Defeated.

San Sebastian, Aug. 12 (AP).—Government forces tonight defeated rebels besieging San Sabastian and Irun as a prelude, their leaders said, to an offensive against Gen. Emilio Mola's rear guard.

In the day-long fighting, shared by men and women of the loyalist militia, the insurgents were dislodged from favorable positions before the two cities—positions which yesterday seemed to give the rebels a key to the northern coast through the port of Pasajes.

Dead and wounded were relatively few among the government fighters, officers said. Twenty-five rebel prisoners were taken in fighting at Oyarzun, which remained, however, in the hands of insurgents.

Rebel artillery was blown off Picoketa Mountain, commanding Irun, by fire from Port Guadaluape and San Sebastian. Three-fourths of the rebel militia was in retreat toward Pamplona.

The projected march against the Mola rear guard had been feared by rebel forces and was a major reason for their attack on the San Sebastian area. By the capture of this seaport, they had hoped to remove any chance of attack from the rear when the army turned southward to lay siege to Madrid.

Several Die in Air Raid.

Lisbon, Aug. 12 (AP).—Several persons were killed under a sustained rebel air raid on Badajoz, near the Portuguese frontier, tonight, and the city was thrown into panic, reports here said.

A Portuguese newspaper correspondent reported from Caia, across the border from Spain, that four trimotored rebel planes circled repeatedly over Badajoz dropping bombs, while another bombed a road along which scores fled to Portugal.

Civil guards and customs agents revolted, the correspondent said, fighting government militia in Badajoz streets and sniping along the Guadiana River, another avenue of escape to Portugal.

Women, children and a few men thronged the international bridge and were admitted to Portugal, he said, after Portuguese guards dis-

Landon Praises Borah Victory, Starts Vacation

Nominee Asserts Idahoan Won State Primary by 'Great Leadership.'

By the Associated Press.

Estes Park, Colo., Aug. 12.—Gov. Alf M. Landon, in Colorado for a rest, commented tonight that the victory of William E. Borah in the Idaho primary was "one of great leadership and statesmanship."

The Republican Presidential nominee's statement referred to Borah's nomination for a sixth term in the United States Senate.

Landon, who asked that no "fuss" be made over this trip, his second to Colorado this summer, paused only briefly in Estes Park Village before continuing to his ranch 8 miles away where Mrs. Landon and his children awaited him.

At Boulder, Colo., on the 100-mile automobile trip from Denver, the Governor stopped twice to acknowledge greetings.

One stop was at the University of Colorado campus. The other was at the courthouse where a crowd, wearing Kansas sunflowers, awaited him.

On the Presidential nominee's first trip he became familiar with several Colorado trout streams, one of which runs across the meadow of the vacation ranch.

After resting for several days Landon will work on several campaign speeches to be delivered in the East, he said. The Governor is scheduled to leave Denver August 20.

Clevenger Killer's Trial Wednesday

Asheville, N. C., Aug. 12 (AP).—Solicitor Zeb V. Nettles said today Martin Moore, colored, would be called to trial next Wednesday in Buncombe County Superior Court for the slaying of Helen Clevenger in her hotel room July 16.

The solicitor said the former hallboy at the Battery Park Hitel would be charged both with murder and first degree burglary—both capital offenses.

Counsel for Moore moved today to have alienists examine the 22-year-old prisoner.

J. S. Styles, one of the two lawyers appointed to defend him, said he would seek permission for the examination from Judge Don Phillips.

3,000 to Attend Power Banquet In Union Station

City's Ballrooms Too Small for Big Event of World Engineers' Parley.

Outstanding engineers, to gather here next month from all over the globe for the Third World Power Conference, will sit down at their official banquet in the waiting room of Union Station, the executive committee of the conference announced yesterday.

The high-ceilinged room, where many a box lunch has been eaten but where a banquet has never before been served, was chosen because it's the only place in Washington big enough to hold 3,000 banqueters. That many are expected to attend the affair, Morris L. Cooke, chairman of the executive committee, said.

The Capital's largest hotel ballroom is hard put to hold 1,500 diners. Washington has no great auditorium such as Cleveland, Detroit, or St. Louis. And so, after making a thorough survey of the situation, Cooke and his committee settled upon Union Station.

With the consent of the Washington Terminal Co., operator of the station, the waiting room will be redecorated especially for the one night of September 10, the date of the engineers' gathering.

Heavy benches which now dot the floor of the waiting room will be moved to the concourse, transforming that barren stretch into a temporary haven for passengers. The ticket offices will stay where they are, but a partition will be erected around the entire waiting room, leaving an 8-foot corridor for travelers to reach the concourse and the tracks.

Although work on making the waiting room into a banquet setting will begin three weeks before the event, passengers will be denied its use for only 8 or 10 hours on the day of the banquet, Tolson said yesterday.

Meanwhile, C. H. Smith, manager of the Savarin Restaurant in the station, is making plans to feed the 3,000. Special heaters are being built to keep the food hot until the 300 waiters—Smith doesn't yet know where he can get that many—are ready to serve it.

While the interior of the station isto be radically changed for the engineers, the exterior will go untouched. Asked if he intended having it washed or sandblasted, Tolson said:

"Not that I know of. The last time we cleaned it a lot of people complained. Said we had spoiled that mellow, Old World look."

Mr. Polly Moran Whitewashed By Polly, Judge Drops Charge

By the Associated Press.

Beverly Hills, Calif., Aug. 12.—The charges against Polly Moran's husband, Martin Malone, of suspicion of assault with a deadly weapon simmered down to a misdemeanor today when Malone pleaded guilty to "exhibiting a gun."

After hearing Miss Moran, the hearty film comedienne, deny stoutly that her athletic husband had ever threatened her with a pistol, Justice Cecil B. Holland said he would drop the felony charge against Malone.

The occasion was Malone's preliminary hearing on charges growing out of the tempestuous morning of July 15 when a domestic argument brought Malone into the toils of the law.

"He never struck me," Miss Moran testified.

"He never hit me.

"He never threatened me with a gun."

When the episode occurred Miss Moran said she contemplated a divorce, but since then she has announced a full reconciliation and the restoration of harmony in the spirited household.

"I thought it would be a good lesson to the boy if I told officers to take him away and lock him up—I thought it would teach him not to be playing with guns," she told Justice Holland.

Her spritely testimony brought laughter from the packed courtroom.

Malone was arrested after screams from the Moran-Malone mansion caused neighbors to summon officers, who reported they clapped handcuffs on him after taking a pistol away from him. They said the gun had jammed.

Miss Moran at the time told newspapermen Malone came home in an angry mood because he had heard

A Third 'Father' Files His Claim To Boy Triplets

By the United Press.

West Palm Beach, Fla., Aug. 12.—Paternity of baby boy triplets, already claimed by two "fathers," was complicated further tonight when a third man filed a claim for the children.

Aubrey K. Johnson, former husband of the mother of the triplets, today wrote Circuit Judge E. C. Chillingworth saying: "I consider the babies are mine and I am claiming them."

Custody of the children was awarded to the mother a few days ago by Judge Chillingworth, who declined to assume the role of a Solomon, and avoided a decision on their paternity.

Johnson, husband of the mother when the triplets were born, said he had "a more just claim to them than any other man." He was estranged from his wife when the babies were born, however.

At the same time, counsel for Louis D. Pierre, Miami, one of the babies' original claimants, announced he would file a petition within two weeks for a rehearing on the question of fatherhood.

The babies were born ten months ago to Mrs. Lois Johnson. Pierre and the "other father," T. J. Miller, of West Palm Beach, both claimed paternity. Johnson originally did not enter into the controversy.

U. S. to Study Sharecropper Peonage Cases

Attorney General Homer S. Cummings yesterday ordered "conflicting" evidence on alleged violation of Federal peonage laws in the Arkansas sharecropper region presented to a Federal grand jury in Little Rock, Ark.

The so-called "conflicting" evidence was uncovered by Federal investigators sent into the area in connection with the east Arkansas cotton workers' strike.

Cummings said that George P. Jones, special assistant to the Attorney General, attached to the criminal division of the Justice Department, was instructed to present the case.

No Federal Case.

The announcement was made after Miss Willie Sue Blagden, who with the Rev. Claude C. Williams, was flogged when they visited Earle, Ark., to investigate the death of a sharecropper, called at the department yesterday. Miss Blagden asked to see the department's report on the flogging, and was told it would not be made public.

Cummings explained that an independent investigation was made of the flogging case, and it was stated no evidence was discovered indicating the Federal kidnaping act, nor the postal laws, had been violated. He said the investigation of the flogging of Miss Blagden and the Rev. Mr. Williams, "failed to reveal any violation of Federal statutes."

"The facts with respect to this flogging, as ascertained by a representative of the Department of Justice, were brought to the attention of Gov. J. Marion Futrell, of Arkansas, for such action as might be possible under the laws of that State," Cummings added.

Frequent Charges.

Although Gov. Futrell was said to have acknowledged receipt of the information in a letter to Cummings, his letter was not made public.

Samuel C. Whitaker, a special assistant to Cummings, investigated at separate times the peonage and flogging charges, and it was on the strength of one of his reports that the department determined to present the peonage evidence to a Federal grand jury.

Frequent charges have been made that a condition of peonage exists among some Arkansas sharecroppers, that tenant farmers who hired themselves out to landowners at the end of the year owed the planters money, and that persons had been arrested as vagrants and forced to work off their debts to the landowners.

A strike was called by the Southern Tenant Farmers' Union several weeks ago. The union, which has been attempting to organize tenant farmers, demanded a wage increase of from $1 to $1.50 for a 10-hour day. Planters blamed the strike on "outside influences."

Norman Thomas, Socialist candidate, recently charged "peonage, mob law and murder" in an "appeal" to President Roosevelt "to act in this monstrous perversion of everything decent in the American tradition." Thomas signed his telegram as chairman of the emergency committee for relief of strikers.

Ax Over Washington

By Robert C. Albright.

Whether or not the next Congress chooses to act to eliminate overlappings, duplications of effort, unnecessary expenditures and agencies working at cross purposes, all honeycombing the present administrative structure, the facts will be laid bare at hearings following the November elections.

Both the Byrd committee of the Senate, which will strike first at the overnight growth of new agencies that accompanied the New Deal, and the President's committee, concerned first with "management" problems, have seen fit to subordinate "politics" as far as possible by sweeping the whole issue clear of the campaign.

Public hearings will be conducted by both groups in the fall. (The House reorganization committee has not yet functioned.) From the dual sets of hearings, from a survey being made by the Brookings Institution for the Byrd committee, from questionnaires sent out by Senator Byrd, and from independent researches being made by the President's committee, at least two sets of recommendations will be framed and presented to Congress in January.

What they will propose, whether they will conflict in their findings, and whether there will be sufficient public sentiment to force Congress to do anything more than it has in the past—nothing—is a matter for conjecture.

Preliminary discussions, and independent proposals, however, have indicated a field for action that one or more of the reorganization committees may be expected to explore.

Some members of the Byrd committee have indicated they want to go thoroughly into publicity functions of the various emergeney and regular agencies.

The multiplicity of housing activities in the emergency set-up, separately administered by the Public Works Administration, the Resettlement Administration, the Federal Housing Administration, HOLC and others has attracted attention, as have duplicated Federal construction activities, unde. the Army engineers, WPA, PWA, the Treasury and other units.

The multitudinous Federal credit operations, conducted by an ever-increasing host of overlapping

Senate Inquiry Calls Detectives In Labor Spying

La Follette Group Orders Records of Agencies Brought to D. C.

Twenty-one subpenas for the records of a large number of detective agencies were issued yesterday by the Senate sub-committee headed by Senator La Follette (Progressive), Wisconsin, which has been investigating alleged labor espionage.

The detective agency officials were ordered to appear before the committee Wednesday and bring all records pertaining to labor espionage, strike breaking and similar activities.

The action appeared significant because it comes in the midst of the campaign by the Committee for Industrial Organization to organize the steel industry and because of the increasingly active part the same labor group is taking in the political campaign.

The hearing next Wednesday is expected to be only for the purpose of accepting the records, but on September 15 the committee is expected to resume the hearing of evidence. This hearing is expected to cover alleged activities of employers in opposition to labor organization.

Subpenas were issued for the records kept in various of its offices by the Railway Audit and Inspection Co. and for some of the officials of the company, for records and officials of the Pinkerton and Burns agencies and for a number of individuals connected with other investigating concerns.

D. C. May Pass Rule for Arrest Of Jaywalkers

Commissioners Will Meet Tomorrow to Act on Van Duzer Plan.

The District Commissioners tomorrow will act upon a recommendation of Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer that policemen be authorized to arrest jayhawkers who disobey police instructions.

Melvin C. Hazen, president of the Board of Commissioners, while approving this regulation, disclosed that he had rejected a more stringent regulation against jaywalking on the ground that enforcement would be impossible with the present police personnel.

The proposed regulation merely states:

It will not apply where pedestrians cross a street at other than intersections so long as no policeman is around to halt the jaywalking. Van Duzer expects it to be applied principally at intersections where policemen are stationed, and particularly at the points where "Walk!" lights have been installed.

Culminating more than a year of discussion of possible curbs on pedestrians, during which Van Duzer has been at odds with the corporation counsel's office, the regulation is expected to be adopted. Both George E. Allen and Lieut. Col. Dan I. Sultan are out of the city, but Capt. Patrick Tansey, Assistant Engineer Commissioner, will hold Col. Sultan's proxy.

Zoo's Anti-Nostalgia Crates To Move Elephants 200 Yards

Foibles of captive elephants—home-loving creatures with habitual fondness for accustomed domiciles—were causing Director William M. Mann and Head Keeper William H. Blackburn much concern at the Zoo last night.

With the new Pachyderm House nearing completion, both were contemplating the difficulty they face in moving the elephants some 200 yards. There is much, they agreed, in the old saying that an elephant never forgets.

Elephants are ever unwilling to leave a place which has been their home for years, Dr. Mann pointed out. The modern structure, the last word in elephant houses, will be ready for occupancy by Jubina, the big tusker, and her ponderous chums, Babe and Kechil, next Thanksgiving.

Tentative plans for moving the beasts, as revealed yesterday, were that Jubina and Kechil will be crated separately and hauled to their new home on rollers. Before this the crates must be placed in the elephants' play yard as they become used to them, and eventually enter them with a little prodding on the designated day.

The crates then will be transported to the new Pachyderm House.

As for Babe, the century-old Indian "bull," she simply will be led on foot. For years with the circus taught her that where she lives is incidental.

Three Are Killed In Nebraska Blast

Lincoln, Nebr., Aug. 12 (AP).—Three men were killed and three critically injured in an explosion which trapped them in a unit of the Grainger Brothers Wholesale Fruit & Grocery Co. here today. Cause of the explosion is unknown.

The dead: James C. Moise, 55, of Omaha, Nebr.; Fred Brown, of Lincoln; Wesley Gillespie, of Lincoln.

Moise, manager of the Omaha branch of the fruit dispatch company, died in a hospital tonight, more than eight hours after he was taken from the wreckage of the building. The bodies of Brown and Gillespie, employes of the company, were taken from the debris tonight, after city and WPA workers dug through the tons of brick and timbers for more than seven hours.

Liberty League Letter Assails Roosevelt Talk

While the American Liberty League yesterday was making public an open letter criticizing President Roosevelt's use of the term "economic royalists" in discussing certain business groups, Maj. George L. Berry, head of Labor's Nonpartisan League, was publishing a Kansan's attack on the administration of Gov. Alf M. Landon, Republican standard bearer. The latter attack brought immediate denial of charges contained in it.

The Liberty League made public a letter to the President from Dr. Gus W. Dyer, professor of economics at Vanderbilt University, referring to Mr. Roosevelt's acceptance address and saying:

"You say in your address, 'There was no place among this royalty for our many thousands of merchants who sought to make a worthy use of the American system of initiative and profit.'"

The letter then says the number of retail stores in 1929 totaled 1,543,158, classified as follows:

Dr. Dyer maintained that the figures showed that "the conditions you portrayed exist only in the minds of Socialists, Communists and other radicals, who are grossly ignorant of the facts of our industrial life."

The attack on the Landon Administration was in the form of a report to Maj. Berry by Leslie Doud, editor of the Kansas Labor Weekly at Topeka, Kans. Doud wrote that the Landon Administration "is controlled and dominated by two outstanding interests —the school book trust and the light and power trust." He said the books cost Kansas children more than the same books cost in other States while "a ring of school book representatives" split royalty fees.

His charge, the Associated Press reported, was termed "ridiculous and untrue" by C. A. Case, chairman of the Kansas school book commission.

Doud also wrote:

"Deane Ackers, general manager of the Kansas Power & Light Co., is president of the State Chamber of Commerce, and the direct link between the United States Chamber of Commerce and the Landon State administration. Landon selected Ackers to head the Kansas Emergency Relief Administration, and through him has been exercised a control over the expenditure of all relief funds in Kansas."

To this, John G. Stutz, KERC director, told the Associated Press at Topeka:

"Gov. Landon has made no appointments whatever on the Kansas Emergency Relief Committee. All officers were appointed by Gov. Woodring. Deane Ackers, appointed by Gov. Woodring, is still chairman."

Meanwhile, John D. M. Hamilton, Republican National Chairman, declared at Reno, Nev., yesterday, that "the so-called Labor Nonpartisan League * * * is under the direction of men who are beholden to the Roosevelt Administration."

John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers, announced yesterday he would campaign actively in Pennsylvania for Preident Roosevelt's re-election, but William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, said in Rochester, N. Y., the federation's only part in the election drive would be circulation of the major parties' labor planks and the nominees' labor records.

Pittsburgher Says Strike Is Unlikely

By the Associated Press.

Walter A. Jones, Pittsburgh businessman, said yesterday he had told President Roosevelt there would be no steel strike and that the campaign of the Committee for Industrial Organization to organize steel workers would be successful without serious labor trouble.

After his White House visit, Jones also said he had advised Mr. Roosevelt that large business concerns in Pennsylvania were accumulating what he described as "huge campaign funds" from profits which, he said, "probably will be used against him."

A former member of the bituminous coal code authority, Jones said he believed the men who really were running the steel business would sit across a table and "settle these differences."

With reference to politics, Jones said he told the President the Democratic Party would "have a fight in Ohio and is going to have a big fight in Pennsylvania, but I don't think there is any question about the final results."

Paul Mellon Is Flown To Miami; Ill of Fever

Miami, Fla., Aug. 12 (AP).—Paul Mellon, son of Andrew W. Mellon, of Pittsburgh, was flown here today from Bimini and placed in a Miami hospital for treatment of "an acute febrile condition."

The plane was sent from Miami to pick up Mellon at the request of Capt. Ed Moore of the cruiser Osprey, who radioed an air line here.

Hospital attendants said Mellon was suffering from a fever but that his condition was not serious.

Mule-Whips Outlawed.

Savannah, Ga., Aug. 12 (AP).—Soft words, or otherwise, will be the only legal method henceforth by which drivers may make city-owned mules gee and haw. All whips were confiscated and locked up at city hall today on complaint of citizens, who said something should be substituted for rawhide to coax the animals along.

Quadruple Life Savers.

Hollis, Okla., Aug. 12 (AP).—The famous Keys quadruplets—Leota, Roberta, Mary and Mona—became members of the American Red Cross Life Saving Corps today. "It was worth it," chorused the 21-year-old sisters, exhibiting blistered backs after passing the swimming tests.

Flood Areas to Be Visited by President Roosevelt

The Political Arena

By the Associated Press.

Fred M. Harris, former Kansas State Senator and now a member of the State board of regents, said last night that Gov. Alf M. Landon, the Republican Presidential nominee, has never "broken a pledge," or "been guilty of any inconsistency."

Speaking in the series of broadcasts by William Hard under the auspices of the Republican National Committee, Harris said:

"Gov. Landon, as a private individual and a private business man, has changed his mind on questions as time went on and his information grew. As a public man, he has never been guilty of any inconsistency. In public life in Kansas he has worked for and accomplished everything which in his campaigns he has said he would do."

New York, Aug. 12 (AP).—Three former aids of Dr. Francis E. Townsend met here today and predicted the Californian's old-age pension movement will be "on the rocks" in three months if the leader "continues on his present course."

The trio were Dr. Clinton C. Wunder, ousted Eastern director of the Townsend campaign; John B. Kiefer, ousted Central States director, and Nathan J. Roberts, Southern director, who said his resignation is imminent.

Convinced that Dr. Townsend is willing to wreck his cause to prevent the re-election of President Roosevelt, they said, they are working on a program to resuscitate the pension movement, the nature of which they would not disclose.

New York, Aug. 12 (AP).—Col. Robert R. McCormick, publisher of the Chicago Tribune, and ardent supporter of Gov. Alf M. Landon for President, today visited Representative Joseph W. Martin, jr., Eastern division manager of the Republican National Committee.

When asked about the gubernatorial candidacy of William Hale "Big Bill" Thompson, who is running on the Lemke Union Party ticket, Col. McCormick said "it's just a whisper."

New York, Aug. 12 (AP).—Democratic National Committeeman Joseph McGrath of Massachusetts said here today: "I don't think Smith will come up to Boston as reported to make an address against Mr. Roosevelt.

"If he does," McGrath continued, "he will be disappointed at the chagrin and the change of attitude of the thousands of people who formerly followed him loyally.

"After Smith has had an opportunity to sound out sentiment of these former followers I am certain he will not come to Boston."

Union, S. C., Aug. 12 (AP).—Senator James F. Byrnes referred today to the anti-Roosevelt gathering at Detroit Friday as a meeting of "disgruntled Democrats" to organize "the Jeffersonian Democratic," and said former Senator Reed (Democrat), Missouri, "dominated" the group.

The Senator asserted the group should "have the courage to support Landon" if it opposed the Administration.

"The Southern group wants to fight Roosevelt, pray for Landon's success, and yet be in a position to say that they did not vote the Republican ticket," he said. "There are not enough disappointed office seekers in the country to affect the result."

New York, Aug. 12 (AP).—Democratic Chairman James A. Farley today conferred with Democratic leaders from four States in the first of a series of group conferences which he said would bring leaders from every State here within the next two weeks.

The meeting today was attended by national committeemen, national committeewomen, State chairmen and State vice chairmen from Massachusetts, Connecticut, Rhode Island and North Carolina.

Senator Joseph Guffey, of Pennsylvania, chairman of the Democratic senatorial committee, also was a caller at Democratic headquarters.

Waterville, Me., Aug. 12 (AP).—Norman Thomas, Socialist candidate for the Presidency, characterized today the Rev. Charles E. Coughlin's campaign in behalf of the National Union for Social Justice as "Nazi emotionalism."

Thomas said he disliked "the way Father Coughlin is going around the country tearing his shirt."

"Amuse yourself sometime," he told a local gathering. "By comparing the 15 points of the National Union for Social Justice with the 24 points when Hitler was coming into power."

Wilkes-Barre, Pa., Aug. 12 (U.P.).—Dr. Francis E. Townsend said tonight that the re-election of the Roosevelt Administration would be "the greatest disaster in the history of the United States."

Speaking before a Townsend meeting, the founder of the old age revolving pension plan termed the present administration "a jackass government that is spending the taxpayers' money like drunken sailors."

Townsend said if he had to choose between President Roosevelt and Gov. Alf M. Landon, he would pick the Kansan, but predicted that Representative William Lemke, although not endorsed by the Townsend organization, would be the next President.

Des Moines, Iowa, Aug. 12 (AP).—The Iowa Federation of Labor voted its unanimous support to Franklin D. Roosevelt today, but sidetracked immediate consideration of resolutions calling for licensed private sale of liquor instead of the present liquor control system.

Support for Roosevelt in his campaign for re-election was a foregone conclusion after the convention hailed Labor President J. C. Lewis' address in which he commended the President's labor record and assailed that of Gov. Alf M. Landon, the Republican Presidential nominee.

7 Arrested as Stones Fly in Ohio Strike

Cincinnati, Aug. 12 (AP).—Stones flew again at the Remington-Rand plant in suburban Norwood late today, causing the arrests of four men and three women.

Numerous windows in the plant were shattered as a crowd of several hundred marched upon it after 230 workers who entered in the morning had been removed in police-protected automobiles.

The disorders were the most serious in the two days the company has operated in the face of an unsettled 11 weeks' strike.

Gen. Cabanellas, Rebel, Is Reported Wounded

Madrid, Aug. 12 (AP).—Gen. Miguel Cabanellas, rebel commander and head of the insurgent provisional government proclaimed at Burgos, has ben critically wounded, the government controlled newspaper ABC reported tonight.

Gen. Cabanellas, until the outbreak of the Spanish civil war, was captain general of the Barcelona district. He now is at the head of the rebel forces at Zaragoza.

Heat Wave Blankets Southwestern Areas

New Orleans, Aug. 12 (AP).—Portions of the Southwest today remained blanketed in an excessive heat wave while a capricious tropical disturbance in the western part of the Gulf of Mexico entered Mexico's coast land without material force.

The United States Weather Bureau here, which had charted the tropical storm since Sunday, reported this afternoon that it had blown inland along the Mexican coastline north of Tampico.

The gulf disturbance was of slight intensity and its quick dissipation was forecast.

Navy Medical Corps To Fill 5 Vacancies

Twenty-five vacancies in the United States Navy Medical Corps will be filled after examinations for medical officers are held next December 1, the Navy Department announced yesterday. Examinations will be held at the Naval Medical School here, at Mare Island, Calif., and Great Lakes, Ill.

Candidates for admission to the examinations must be between the ages of 21 and 32 years at the time of appointment, graduates of class "A" medical schools only, and have completed an internship of one year in a hospital accredited for interns by the American Medical Association and the American College of Surgeons, officials said.

French Loan to Poland May Follow Conference

Warsaw, Aug. 12 (AP).—A new French rearmament loan to Poland predicated on co-operation between the French and Polish armies may result from a five-day visit of Gen. Marie Gustave Gamelin, chief of staff of the French army here.

The Frenchman, arriving today, was welcomed by Inspector General Edward Rydz-Smigly, of the Polish army, and other dignitaries, including the French Ambassador.

Newspapers treated the visit as of the greatest importance and as reaffirming the solidity of the French-Polish alliance of 1921.

Cosmopolitan Club Arranges Stag Night

Plans for sumemr stag night, to be held August 20, will be discussed at a meeting of the executive committee of the Cosmopolitan Club today at 6 p. m. at the Columbia Country Club.

The regular weekly luncheon and meeting of the club will be held at the Carlton Hotel at 12:30 p. m. today. Michael D. Schaefer, secretary, will speak.

possibility that the drought may be responsible for the conference. Under the law the President has authority, on recommendation of the Tariff Commission, to cut tariffs as much as 50 per cent. Because of the drought situation it has been believed likely that some move would be made to reduce tariffs of feed for livestock and perhaps on some other farm products.

Tariff Reduced in 1934.

Such a reduction was made in the tariff on livestock feed during the 1934 drought. The President said at his press conference Tuesday that he had taken no action in this direction.

Meanwhile, the President continued to keep in touch with the international situation. Acting Secretary of State Phillips was a luncheon guest. The forthcoming appointment of Phillips as Ambassador to Rome was discussed.

Admiral William H. Standley, acting Secretary of the Navy, also conferred with Mr. Roosevelt. Another visitor was Mayor S. Davis Wilson of Philadelphia, who asked that one of the two battleships that are expected soon to be built be constructed at the Philadelphia Navy Yard. He also asked for public works money for his city.

The President also talked during the day with Daniel Bell, acting Budget Director, and with J. F. T. O'Connor, Comptroller of the Currency.

The President's first stop on his flood inspection trip will be made at Johnstown, Pa. He will go from there to Cleveland, where he will visit the Great Lakes Exposition. From Cleveland the President will go to Chautauqua, N. Y., for a speech on foreign affairs. On Saturday he will resume his flood inspection with visits to Binghamton, N. Y., and Scranton and Wilkes-Barre, Pa. By Saturday night he will be at his home in Hyde Park, N. Y.

On his trip he will be accompanied by Army engineers and by representatives of the CCC, WPA and Soil Erosion Service.

France Expanding Warplane Program

Paris, Aug. 12 (AP).—The French Senate today voted a five-year program to keep the French army constantly supplied with at least 1,500 new planes.

Enactment of the program quickly followed reports here that Germany now has more than 2,500 ships.

Air Minister Pierre Cot asserted a special fund of 2,775,000,000 francs (about $182,595,000) would be spent in keeping present aircraft up to date and for replacements.

Some ships already are being added to the fleet, which, with those provided under the new program, will give France approximately 2,500 ships fit for active service.

Parley Agrees on Plan To Settle Ohio Strike

Toledo, Ohio, Aug. 12 (AP).—An agreement to settle a strike of union gas workers came today from a conference conducted by the Toledo Industrial Peace Board.

Representatives of the Gas Workers Union and the Ohio Fuel Gas Co. and its affiliate, the Northwestern Ohio Natural Gas Co., signed the agreement. It was subject to ratification by the union membership, which went on strike Monday.

The union's principal demands were for recognition as the sole agent of the employes for collective bargaining, and for seniority rights to protect the workers from discharges. The company recently announced it would have to discharge about one-third of its 300 employes for the purpose of economy.

2 Ex-Aids of Capone Freed by Chicago Police

Chicago, Aug. 12 (AP).—Two former Capone lieutenants, Frank (the Enforcer) Nitti and Louis (Little New York) Campagna, were released from police custody today almost at the same instant that an attorney representing the two men appeared before a criminal court judge with a petition for writs of habaes corpus.

The former Capone gangsters were seized for investigation by Police Lieut. John Howe downtown yesterday. Howe said he arrested the two because "they had not been interrogated for a long time."

The habeas corpus hearing was about to get under way before Judge Denis J. Normoyle when Lieut. Howe phoned the court and said both men had been released.

Robinson Wins, Borah Is Victor In Senate Races

Florida Picks Townsendite for Trammell's Seat; 11 States Still to Vote.

By the Associated Press.

Senators Robinson, of Arkansas, and Borah, of Idaho, were renominated by wide margins Tuesday despite Twonsend opposition, while Florida Democrats put up Charles O. Andrews, an advocate of that old-age pension plan, for the unexpired term of the late Senator Park Trammell.

The three primaries brought to 24 the contests in which candidates have now been chosen for the 36 senatorial seats to be filled in November. Eleven States have yet to act—Colorado, Delaware, Georgia, Massachusetts, Michigan, Mississippi, New Hampshire, New Mexico (two seats open), Rhode Island, South Carolina and Wyoming.

Once the lists have been filled, the senatorial campaign committees of both major parties are expected to intensify their activities. On a call yesterday at the New York office of James A. Farley, the Democratic chairman, Senator Guffey, of Pennsylvania, again predicted Democratic gains on his side of the Capitol.

Senator Townsend, of Delaware, who heads the Republican senatorial campaign, as does Guffey for the Democrats, has expressed hope "that we will pick up several seats." Of those being contested, 23 at present are Democratic, 12 Republican and one Farmer-Labor.

Robinson, the Democratic floor leader, far outdistanced his two opponents from the time returns began accumulating at Little Rock. Out at Boise, Borah called his own margin "the finest compensation a man can have." His Democratic opponent will be Gov. C. Ben Ross.

Renomination of the two veterans fitted in largely with the record of thep rimaries to date. Senator Gore, of Oklahoma, a Democrat who differed with some Administration policies, is the only incumbent so far defeated for renomination. Representative Lee, a New Deal supporter, is the nominee in his place.

Other changes also are certain. In Louisiana, Mrs. Rose Long—widow of Huey Long—did not stand for renomination, and her place will be taken by Allen J. Ellender. Friends of Senator Norris, of Nebraska, are still trying to induce him to run independently, both the Republican and Democratic nominations having been made after he announced he would retire, but he has given no inkling of a change of mind.

In Colorado, where the primary comes September 8, Senator Costigan, Democrat, is not a candidate. Nor does the Republican Hastings of Delaware seek another term. The State convention there will be held August 26.

Robinson Goes Fishing.

The race for Governor developed into the closest in Arkansas history with Attorney General Carl E. Bailey holding a slight lead over Secretary of State Ed F. McDonald.

Bailey, outspoken critic of the present State administration headed by Gov. J. M. Futrell, had 64,260 to 60,802 for McDonald, actively supported by Futrell, with returns from 1,873 out of 2,156 precincts tabulated. R. A. Cook, Little Rock, trailed with 52,463.

Three incumbent Arkansas Representatives ran far ahead of the field while a fourth was in a nip-and-tuck race.

Representative W. J. Driver's total in the First District was greater than the combined vote of his two opponents.

Representative John E. Miller held a lead of approximately 1,200 over Roy Richardson in the Second District on returns from 261 of 350 precincts, 13,454 to 12,223.

Incumbent Ben Cravens, of Fort Smith, held a safe lead over four opponents in the Fourth District.

In the Seventh District, where Representative Tilman B. Parks was not a candidate for renominstion, Wade Kitchens, of Magnolia, built up a substantial lead over Neil C. Marsh, of El Dorado. Kitchens had 18,071 to 14,728 for Marsh with returns in from 287 of 295 precincts.

Townsend Lauds Borah.

Wilkes-Barre, Pa., Aug. 12 (AP).—Dr. Frances E. Townsend, whose pension plan sympathizers waged a losing fight for Byron Defenbach against Senator William E. Borah in the Idaho primaries, said today that the veteran Republican Senator was one of "the cleanest men ever to hold that office."

While criticizing the forces he said were behind Senator Joseph T. Robinson, Democratic leader who was renominated in Arkansas, Dr. Townsend said Senator Borah gained victory by his reputation, which he described as one of the finest in American politics.

Wallington, Dancer Are Wed in Detroit

Detroit, Aug. 12 (AP).—James (Jimmy) Wallington, radio announcer, and Betty Jane Cooper, dancer, were married today in Grosse Pointe Presbyterian Church.

Wallington, who is Eddie Cantor's master of ceremonies, and his bride, recently a dancer with George White's "Scandals," plan to fly to New York on the first part of their honeymoon and then go to the West Coast.

Governor of S. C. Hurt in Collision

Columbia, S. C., Aug. 12 (AP).—Gov. Olin Johnston suffered contusions and shock in an automobile accident this afternoon, but left the hospital within an hour after the accident.

The Governor, alone, apparently was hurrying to Columbia Hospital after dinner to visit Mrs. Johnston, who bore their first child there Friday.

A woman and child, occupants of the other car, escaped injury.

Witnesses were quoted as saying the Governor's car turned over several times.

Hospital attendants said he was unconscious when he arrived at the hospital in an ambulance, but soon regained consciousness.

An examination by his physician revealed a gash on the neck and contusions about the knee. He returned to the executive mansion in an ambulance.

Alfonso Considers Return to Throne

Dellach, Austria, Aug. 12 (AP).—Alfonso of Spain, who gave up his throne in a rebellion without bloodshed five years ago, conferred with his two sons tonight and was believed debating his chances of returning to power in the midst of the present bitter civil war.

Jaime and Juan, his two younger sons, were called here by the one-time monarch and there were unconfirmed rumors he might also discuss a plan of action with Queen Mother Marie of Rumania.

Alfonso himself gave little indication of what he hoped to do and asserted "as long as the disturbances continue, I cannot discuss my plans."

Physician's Trial Starts In Hewitt Sterilization

San Francisco, Aug. 12 (AP).—With the prosecution seeking to put as many women as possible on the jury, two physicians went to trial today on mayhem conspiracy charges growing out of the sterilization of Ann Cooper Hewitt, young heiress.

Both the accused, Dr. Tilton E. Tillman and Dr. Samuel G. Boyd, sat tight-lipped. Four men and eight women remained tentatively in the jury box when court adjourned. Diminutive Miss Hewitt, who charged her mother, Mrs. Maryon Cooper Hewitt, tricked her into submitting to the operation, did not appear, but an assistant district attorney said she would testify.

Union Aid Blamed In Bakery Strike

William M. Edwards, president of the Dutch Baker Boy, Inc., last night said he blamed Robert C. Lester, busines agent for the Bakery Salesmen Union, No. 53, for rejection of his firm's offer to turn over its net profits to its employes.

"Lester was responsible both in January, 1935, when the offer first was made, and now, for its rejection," said the bakery official in a prepared statement.

Union bakery drivers last week walked out of the Dutch Baker Boy shops and began general picketing of its trucks and branches. Several policemen were detailed about the bakery to prevent possibility of an outbreak between strikers and employes.

4,000 Indian Villages Submerged by Floods

Bombay, Aug. 12 (AP).—Four thousand villages were submerged by raging floods today which ruined 20,000 homes. The torrents struck approximately one-third of India, while another third of the country was offering prayers and sacrifices for relief from drought and famine.

The floods destroyed roads and cross as dams burst. Authorities opened refuge camps in the united central provinces and at other points.

Forest Blazes Out of Control In Minnesota

Officials Move to Arrest Persons Responsible; Heavy Loss Feared.

By the Associated Press.

St. Paul, Aug. 12.—The North woods tinder box, threatening a repetition of the 1918 holocaust when damages amounted to $60,000,000, saw several forest fires out of control again today as State officials acted to arrest persons charged with starting blazes in the woods.

Clouds of smoke rolled into Duluth and Cloquet today, partly obscuring the sun.

Even in St. Paul, 200 miles south of the nearest fire zone, a haze of smoke from the northern blazes invaded the city. Motorists here were cautioned to be particularly careful driving at night.

With conditions described by Grover Conzet as the "worst in 25 years and growing worse daily," fire fighters were handicapped by lack of sufficient equipment, absence of rain and renewed outbreak of at least seven fires in the northern part of the State.

One of the worst blazes was in the Markham-Palo area where the body of one fire victim already has been found. That fire was spreading toward Bassett, Toimi and Fairbanks, small communities of settlers.

The scenic Gunflint Trail, through the border forests northwest of Grand Marais, Minn., was closed to traffic.

Conzet said he had reports from International Falls, in an area where another conflagration was raging, that several persons accused of starting fires had been arrested.

Five District Teachers Studying at Columbia

Five Washington school teachers are studying at the summer session of Teachers College, Columbia University, New York, it was announced yesterday.

They are Miss Louise Frances Denney, 1903 Third street northwest; Mrs. Minerva Frances Cupid, 118 V street northwest; Clarence William Davis, 606 Grishorn place northwest; Miss Anna Ramsay Compston, Fairfax Hotel, 2100 Massachusetts avenue northwest, and Miss Mary Abner Cramer, 1801 Sixteenth street northwest.

Rep. Patman to Stump 12 Counties for Blanton

Abilene, Tex., Aug. 12 (AP).—Representative Wright Patman, of the First Texas District, announced today he will stump all 12 counties of the Seventeenth District in behalf of Representative Thomas L. Blanton, who is opposed in the run-off by Clyde L. Garrett, of Eastland, for Democratic renomination.

"Tom has substantially aided me in major battles," Patman declared. "I am not going to see him cut down by the Wall Street gang without raising my voice against it."

Russians Groom Plane For Flight Over Arctic

Fairbanks, Alaska, Aug. 12 (AP).—The Russian fliers, Sigismund Levanevsky and Victor Levchenko, groomed their pontooned plane tonight for an approach to the Arctic in their projected flight from California to Moscow.

They planned to leave tomorrow for Nome, 500 miles west, their last scheduled stopping place on the North American continent. Levanevsky and Levchenko arrived last night from Juneau.

Prince Mike

farmer, and His Imperial Highness Prince Michael Romanoff, of the Russian Romanoffs, appear to be two different persons. Mike, the farmer, loves the soil and dotes on hard work. Prince Michael, the playboy, is one of the ornaments of the bright lights.

For a long time he had New York society fooled into thinking he was the real thing. He smiles when reminded of that now, but he never explains. After he was exposed, he remained as popular as before. There were long periods when he had no visible means of support. Then he appeared in vaudeville and in night clubs. He was a first-class attraction.

But Prince Michael, unlike Mike the farmer, couldn't keep out of trouble. He was in jail repeatedly, usually on minor charges. Then he got into what looked like serious trouble when he became involved in a suit in which Mrs. Wilma Gould was suing her sister-in-law, Anna Gould. Some nasty charges were made against the prince, but they finally were dropped.

These charges made Mike angry. "It was the only accusation ever made against me that wasn't true," he said.

But now his highness is back on Broadway. The columists are expected to celebrate. If he runs true to form, he will be the answer to their prayers.

Canada-Uruguay Pact.

Ottawa, Aug. 12 (AP).—A trade agreement between Canada and Uruguay was signed today in the office of Prime Minister Mackenzie King. It provides for a most-favored nation treatment in tariff matters. It was signed by the prime minister in behalf of Canada and by Mateo Marques Castro for Uruguay.

delegates to the Elks convention, in session here then, refer to him as "Mr. Polly Moran."

After the reconciliation between Polly and her husband was effected they went for a cruise on their yacht, the Tally. The actress and the former intercollegiate boxing champion, now an attorney and broker, returned just in time for their court appearance.

Here is Miss Moran's story of the family argument that brought police:

"He came home just a wee bit intoxicated, and what would I do but start my nagging number.

"He said, 'ah, my little nagging wife.'

"You know the ritual, about husbands always coming home drunk from stag parties.

"Well, I gave him some of that for a while, and ended it by saying:

"'Go blow your brains out!'

"Now no one in the world could have been more surprised than me when he went over to a dressing table by the bed and took out a rusty old gun, an automatic.

"I meant by that that I would simply die of sorrow if he went and killed himself.

"It was a warm night.

"The windows were all wide open and I guess all the neighbors heard me screaming for after a while I heard a knocking at the door and voices came:

"'We are deputy sheriffs. Open up the door and let us come in.'

"I ran down the stairs with the idea of getting some help to keep my poor husband from committing suicide.

"You see, he's a pretty big boy. He was a boxing champ and he could have knocked me down with his little finger.

"I didn't want him to commit suicide in the house."

And at that the whole courtroom laughed.

The husky Malone watched his wife intently during her testimony.

Warren to Reject Post if Offered

Washington, N. C., Aug. 12 (AP).—Representative Lindsay Warren, talked of to be the new Comptroller General of the United States, said today he could not accept the post if it was tendered.

"If by any chance I have been considered by the President for the great position of Comptroller General," Warren said in a formal statement, "it is a distinct compliment and honor. All I know about the matter is what has come to me in the papers and in personal letters from friends. No man in public life ever has received more loyal support and friendship than I have from the people of the First Congressional District. Large numbers of my friends in every county in the district have been kind enough to say that I should remain in Congress.

"This I prefer to do, believing that I can best serve the district, State and our great President in my present position. Therefore, if the position of Comptroller General were tendered me, I could not accept it."

Court to Seal Astor Memoirs; Accord Ready

session before court opened, verbally spanked them for failing to reach an agreement overnight and ordered a postponement until 2 p. m.

Meanwhile, Hollywood—which has heard names of some of its foremost citizens plucked from the pages of Miss Astor's diary and painted across the record of the trial—hoped for peace.

Only members of the film colony proper who worked up enough nerve to attend the hearing were pert Florence Eldredge (Mrs. Fredric March) sister of John Eldredge, actor, who was named as one of Miss Astor's guests in her Tower road home, and Actress Ruth Chatterton.

This pair nestled around Miss Astor, offering her encouragement while her lawyer bickered for the one thing Miss Astor demanded—repossession of the diary.

At noon Judge Knight began a series of swift individual conferences—first with Dr. Thorpe's legal staff, Anderson and A. P. Michael Narlian; then with Wooley. Once he emerged in his shirt sleeves, perspiring but grinning, and told newsmen a decision might be reached "any time now."

Narlian popped out of the judicial chambers a moment later, went into hurried conference with the slender, well-tanned physician, and received "no" for an answer.

Dr. Thorpe, shaking his head violently, reiterated "no, no, no," and it was apparent peace again had been averted. Narlian dashed back into chambers again.

Shortly after noon Anderson took Dr. Thorpe into a private conference room. Their silhouettes could be seen against the glazed glass door, as the lanky attorney gestured at his client. Dr. Thorpe came out scowling and shook his head at newspapermen.

At 2 o'clock Judge Knight, his face betraying weariness from two days' struggle as peacemaker, called court into session, and 20 minutes later—after more secret conferences—recessed the case until tomorrow morning.

As Anderson was packing his briefcase he suddenly broke a silence he maintained all morning and disclosed that a settlement virtually was reached. As he left court he was asked who would get the diary. He turned and snapped:

"You can see that I'm smiling, can't you? Well, I'm smiling because I'm in the saddle in these negotiations."

Extortion Denied.

New York, Aug. 12 (AP).—Two of three defendants charged with extortion of $1,800 from Harry Bannister, actor and theatrical producer, testified today the money was paid to an investigator retained by Bannister during his child-custody fight with Ann Harding, his former wife.

The witnesses, Jerome A. Jacobs, a lawyer, and Harry S. Hechheimer, formerly Bannister's attorney both denied they had received any part of the money.

They said it was paid to Raymond Derringer, formerly a private detective, who was employed by Bannister, they said, to aid him in his legal difficulties with Miss Harding.

Derringer has not yet been called on to refute charges that he and the two lawyers extorted the money from Bannister by threatening to publish derogatory information about him.

The names of several prominent persons were injected into the testimony during the cross examination of Jacobs.

Responding to questions by Assistant District Attorney Eugene J. Finnegan, the witness denied he ever had attempted to "shake down" Walter Chrysler, jr., Paul Bonwit, former head of a Fifth avenue women's shop, or a man named Kerngood, whom Finnegan described as head of the A. B. C. Board at Baltimore, Md.

Uzcudun Death Report Proves 'Exaggerated'

AAA Extends N. Y. Deadline In Milk Battle

Farmers Threaten Strike; District Health Aid Starts Tour.

The Agricultural Adjustment Administration yesterday extended to next Monday the deadline for final briefs on a proposed marketing agreement as an immediate increase in New York milk prices loomed under threat of a Statewide producers strike.

Demand of New York dairy farmers for higher payments by distributors was based, it was said, on the same argument advanced by organized producers supplying milk to Washington. They claim that drought has crippled them economically.

The alternative to a higher price is a milk shortage this autumn, organized producers in the District area said yesterday.

Threaten Strike.

Using stronger language, the New York farmers threatened a strike "with violence more brutal than we have ever seen" unless they are paid more to compensate in some measure for the losses inflicted by drought.

New York expects an increase of a cent a quart in the retail price as a result of the threatened strike. Dairy farmers supplying Washington will receive $3.08 per 100 pounds of milk, compared to $2.45 received in New York, and ask $3.55, compared to the $3.20 sought by New Yorkers.

Dr. Reid E. Ashworth, of the District Health Department, yesterday started on a brief tour of the Washington milk shed in nearby Maryland and Virginia.

Asks for Data.

Dr. Ashworth was instructed by Health Office George C. Ruhland to get first hand data on the testimony given this week by farmers who are asking for an increase of 4 cents a gallon in the price of milk.

Meanwhile it was announced yesterday that AAA economists are evaluating hearing testimony and questionnaire replies to determine whether to recommend to Secretary of Agriculture Wallace that Federal control be established over the Washington milk market.

Haile Selassie Still Is Hopeful Of Ousting Italy

By the Associated Press.

Bath, England, Aug. 12.—Haile Selasse still won't admit the modern Romans of Italy defeated him.

He's resting at this seacoast resort, made famous by the invasion of another group of Romans who conquered Britain in ancient times, and hoping some day to re-establish his Ethiopian kingdom.

The Conquering Lion of Judah—the King of Kings without an empire—apparently is more cheerful than at any time since the League of Nations gave a cold shoulder to his plea for financial assistance.

He has taken heart, his spokesman said today, by reports that remnants of his imperial armies were operating in western Ethiopia and hoped to retake Addis Ababa.

"We are in a strong position with an established seat of government at Gore," the Negus' representative asserted. "The chief difficulty is that we are unable to import munitions."

Selassie, who sought refuge after the diplomatic defeat at Geneva last month, planned to remain several weeks more formulating a program of action, and to await developments in Ethiopia.

He is not going to America in search of sympathy, his representative said, but there was no definite assertion he had abandoned plans for the trip entirely.

Soldier Dies in Crash.

Acacia's Plant Is Dedicated; 3,000 Attend

The new home office building of the Acacia Mutual Life Insurance Co. at 51 Louisiana avenue was officially dedicated at outdoor ceremonies last night.

A crowd of more than 3,000 of whom 1,000 were standing, gathered in front of the building as J. Balch Moor, superintendent of insurance for the District, made the dedication address, formally delivering the structure into the custody of William Montgomery, president of the company.

Moor culminated his address by giving the command for the outside of the building to be lighted for the first time.

Its History Reviewed.

In accepting the custody of the building, Montgomery reviewed its history and told how important cooperative effort had been in its growth. He said the great industrial organizations had not been built by any individual or "by capital standing alone."

"There had to be a host of workers," he said. "I always feel it is unfortunate that capital did not realize this and make a larger distribution of the wealth accumulated to the men and women who helped to make it."

Montgomery said he believed the economic depression, in the United States at least, did not come from scarcity of producion but from lack of purchasing power to buy the goods produced.

Good Wishes Delivered.

Before the dedication speech, business and political leaders delivered their well-wishes to the company. Among the speakers were Col. C. B. Robbins, manager and general counsel of the American Life Convention; Bruce E. Shepherd, representing the Association of Life Insurance Presidents; Frank Rowland, executive secretary of the Life Office Management Association; H. Lawrence Choate, representing the District Life Underwriters; Melvin C. Hazen, District Commissioner, and Maj. Ernest Brown, superintendent of police.

Part of the ceremony, including Montgomery's speech, was broadcast.

With J. Claude Keiper presiding, the program was opened with music by a concert orchestra. Then followed the invocation, delivered by Dr. Bernard Braskamp, of the Gunton Temple Memorial Presbyterian Church.

Selections by the Acacia Employes Glee Club also were on the program. The dedicatory prayer was offered by Dr. Thomas E. Green, of the American Red Cross.

Following the dedication ceremonies was held inside the new building, which was opened to inspection.

Capt. Callahan Rites Are Scheduled Today

Funeral services for Robert Callahan, 57, of 5420 Connecticut avenue northwest, World War veteran and real estate operator, will be held today at 2 p. m. at Gawler's funeral chapel, 1765 Pennsylvania avenue northwest. Callahan, who died Tuesday, was a captain in the Military Intelligence Department during the World War. He will be buried in Arlington Cemetery.

He is survived by a daughter, Mrs. Laurence Mason, of Washington, and a son, Robert, jr., of Baltimore. His wife died a year ago.

Rites for Mrs. Bourn Will Be Held Today

Funeral services for Mrs. Elizabeth Juliet Bourn, 3777 Oliver street northwest, who died Tuesday, will be held today at 2:30 p. m. at the home. Burial will be in Glenwood Cemetery.

Mrs. Bourn was a native of Washington and was the wife of Frank B. Bourn, chief of supplies and accounts of the War Department. She was a member of the Chevy Chase Presbyterian Church and Monticello Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution.

Other survivors are a daughter, Miss Elizabeth Bourn, and two sisters, Mrs. George M. Dempster and Mrs. Frank W. Carden, all of Washington.

Light Glows for Hours After Current Is Off

Chicago, (U.P.).—Aladdin's magic with a lamp is being approached by modern industrial engineers, who have invented a light which continues to shine after it has been extinguished.

Introduced during a homefurnishings exposition in the Merchandise Mart, the light has a chemically treated shade which continues to glow for several hours after the electric bulb is turned off.

LOSE FAT THE EASY WAY

Without Starvation Diets, or Back-Breaking, Bending and Rolling Exercises.

Here's a way to get rid of ugly fat that works hand in hand with Nature. Millions of people are losing millions of pounds of flabby flesh and getting back slender figures, without the need of starvation diets or back-breaking exercises.

Medical science has discovered that one of the causes of too much fat lies in a little gland. It is the duty of this tiny gland to make about one drop and a half every day of a vital fluid. This helps the body "burn" up food and excess fatty tissues just as a good draft of air helps the furnace to burn up coal without forming "clinkers." If this little gland doesn't make this drop and a half of fluid every 24 hours, many people take on ugly fat.

Doctors correct this condition by feeding this little gland the substance it lacks—and Marmola Prescription Tablets are based on this same method. Millions are using them with success. They are prepared by a world-famous medical laboratory. Their formula is published in every package so you know what you are taking.

So don't waste time and money with starvation diets or back-breaking exercises. Go to your druggist today and get a box of Marmola. Try this simple, easy way to get rid of excess fat.

Troubles Taken To Roosevelt By Philatelists

Son of Carter Glass Asks President to Liberalize Stamp Laws.

Stamp collectors, who have been trying in vain for 20 years to get permission to have United States postage stamps published in black and white, yesterday took their troubles to President Roosevelt.

Carter Glass, jr., son of the Virginia Senator, and former vice president of the American Philatelic Society, asked the President himself, a stamp enthusiast, to help them liberalize the law so that the Government would be able to publish pictures of all issues in a pamphlet for checking and information purposes.

At present it is a felony to print these pictures. Stamp collectors have been attempting for two decades to get Congress to pass a bill which would liberalize the law. Only recently have they been able to persuade the Postoffice and Treasury Departments to co-operate with them.

It is for this reason that Glass paid his call yesterday at the White House. Under the proposal he laid before the President, the Government would publish the pamphlet and the plates would be kept by the Bureau of Engraving and Printing. Glass said he thought this could be done without an edict of Congress.

The President, he said on leaving, expressed himself quite sympathetic with the plan.

Mrs. George Cleary Dies at Her Home

Mrs. Mary G. Cleary, wife of George J. Cleary, president of the particular council of the Society of St. Vincent de Paul and president of the Trinidad Citizens Association, died yesterday at her home, 1000 I street northeast.

Mrs. Cleary, a native of Philadelphia, was a member of the Ladies of Charity and the Sodality of Holy Name Church. She is survived by eight children, George, William, Francis, Catherine, Olivia and Margaret Cleary, Mrs. Morris MacGregor and Mrs. Thomas Ridolfi.

Funeral services will be held at the Holy Name Church tomorrow at 9 a. m. A solemn mass of requiem will be celebrated by the rector, the Rev. John W. Dowling. Burial will be in Mount Olivet Semetery.

Mrs. Jane Gould, 65, Is Dead in Capital

Mrs. Jane Gould, 65, a native of Ireland, died yesterday at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Dorothy G. Hillig, 4910 Forty-third street northwest.

Born in County Leitrim, Ireland, Mrs. Gould came to this country when 14 years old and made her home in Providence, R. I. In 1917 she moved to this city to live with her daughter. Her husband, Louis Gould, died 33 years ago.

Funeral services will be held tomorrow at 9 a. m. at St. Ann's Catholic Church. Burial will be in Mount Olivet Cemetery.

Besides her daughter she is survived by three sons, George A. Gould, Newport, R. I.; Francis L. Gould, Long Island City, N. Y., and Walter R. Gould, of this city.

"100,000 MILES? That's Nothing!
I'VE DRIVEN MY DODGE 281,000 MILES!"
Says FRED CAPRON, SPOKANE, WASH.

Dodge Owners from Coast to Coast Report Sensational Mileage from Dodge Cars

"I bought this car in 1920," says Mr. Capron. "I drive it every day in all kinds of weather. In my opinion, there is no car to equal the Dodge for dependability and economy. I am known by my car, and believe me, it is a real advertisement."

FOR 22 years the words "Dodge" and "Dependability" have been synonymous... and no wonder... from all parts of the country come reports of Dodge cars that have been driven nine — twelve — fourteen — sixteen years!... Dodge cars driven 100,000 miles—150,000 miles, 200,000 miles, 280,000 miles!... That's one of the reasons why more people buy Dodge cars than any other make with the exception of the three lowest-priced cars!

But, though Dependability scores with every motorist, that's not the only reason Dodge is the fastest-selling big car in America... Dodge economy!—that news too has spread from Coast to Coast like wildfire... owners report 18 to 24 miles per gallon of gas... astonishingly low upkeep cost... money savings so substantial that—in the long run—many owners say they more than make up the few dollars difference in cost between Dodge and small, lowest-priced, competitive cars.

Dodge gives you more for your money—more extra-value features than you can find in cars priced even $500 higher than Dodge... the safety-steel body, genuine hydraulic brakes... the Air-glide-Ride... Chair-Height seats... redistribution of weight equally to all four wheels... patented Floating Power engine mountings... breath-taking beauty... roomier interiors, more luxurious than ever before.

Don't miss driving this big, new Dodge! Make the free economy test! See with your own eyes how Dodge saves gasoline! And don't forget that Dodge now costs only a few dollars more than lowest-priced cars!

U. S. May Void Planting Curbs On Grain in '37

Restrictions on Wheat and Corn May Be Lifted, Says Department.

Planting restrictions on wheat and corn, which, coupled with drought devastation, have cut supplies of both to record lows, may be modified drastically or removed altogether next year, it was indicated at the Department of Agriculture yesterday.

Officials said it was too early in the season to say what revisions in the soil conservation program would be made, but indicated important shifts were under consideration. Farmers will be sounded out in the field before any changes are ordered, it was said.

Renewal of proposals for "crop insurance" was made by Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace meanwhile, according to Associated Press reports from Chicago. Dispatches quoted Wallace as saying the insurance proposal he first advanced in Kansas City last month would be whipped into legislative shape by the time Congress opened in January.

Wallace Plan Recalled.

The proposal smacks of Wallace's "ever normal granary" plan, under which crops would be stored in bumper years for distribution in lean seasons. The insurance plan contemplates farmers setting aside a given amount of their crops each season as "premiums," in return for which the Government would insure their crops. In good years these would be stored as "insurance reserves," and paid out in bad years to supplement poor corps.

Wallace is anxious to have it thoroughly discussed among farmers before it is proposed at the next session of Congress. Both the 1937 soil conservation program and the new crop insurance theory will be discussed at regional conferences with farmers in the fall.

The total number of drought counties listed yesterday as eligible for Federal relief was boosted to 956 in 22 States, when 26 counties in Kansas and 10 in Nebraska were added to the list. All of Oklahoma is now eligible, 80 of the 105 counties in Kansas and 79 of Nebraska's 93 counties.

56,893 Put to Work.

Deputy WPA Administrator Aubrey Williams reported yesterday that 56,893 farmers had been put to work in nine of the Great Plains States. He said Montana's job quota had been increased indefinitely. Howard Hunter, assistant in charge, said work for farmers in Iowa and Wisconsin would be provided by the end of the week. 25,000 jobs for southern Illinois farmers would be announced later this week, and the 25,000 quota for each of the Dakotas would be adjusted to meet conditions.

An Agriculture Department statement yesterday said cattle being fed for market on August 1 were 3 per cent more numerous than last year, and announced increases over the last month in cold storage stocks of meat, poultry, eggs, butter, cheese and fruits.

An Associated Press dispatch from Ottawa, Canada, said official figures for the dominion's wheat carryover at the end of the crop year, July 31, placed it at 108,747,059 bushels, the highest figure in seven years.

Knox to Open West Virginia Appeal Today

G. O. P.'s Vice Presidential Candidate Plans Trip to Huntington.

By the Associated Press.

White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., Aug. 12.—Col. Frank Knox, Republican Vice Presidential candidate, completed plans tonight for his excursion to Huntington tomorrow to address the West Virginia State Republican convention and open his party's campaign in this area.

He planned to leave this mountain resort early tomorrow afternoon, going by automobile to Charleston. There he will confer with Walter S. Hallanan, national committeeman, before continuing to Huntington.

His address, the second of a campaign tour which will take him from Maine to Seattle, will be delivered in the city auditorium at 8:30 p. m.

A prediction that the Republican campaign will be successful in Michigan was brought to Knox today by James E. Davidson, of Bay City, Mich., Republican national committeeman. They conferred in Knox's suite here, discussing the appearance Knox will make on Labor Day in Alma, Mich., to open the national drive in that State.

Knox will make a second speech at Grand Rapids September 29, at the end of a stumping tour into the Northwest and Pacific Coast. He will address the State Republican convention at Grand Rapids.

Knox worked today on his August 27 speech in Hampton Beach, N. H., where he will appear before the Rockingham County rally, expected to draw Republicans from four States. He announced that Burlington, Vt., had been selected as the site of his August 28 address.

Program to Honor Composer's Birth

The birthday anniversary of Samuel Coleridge-Taylor, noted composer who was born August 15, 1875, in London, will be observed with a program of his music and with talks of his life and work tomorrow night in the Washington Conservatory of Music.

Miss V. Josephine Muse director, will have charge of the anniversary program.

Taylor, who made several visits to this country, was most widely known here for choral trilogy of compositions based on Longfellow's poem, "Hiawatha." With the composer conducting, this work was performed in Washington in 1904. Taylor died of pneumonia in 1912.

Ned Sparks Wins Point In Action Over Divorce

Los Angeles, Aug. 12 (AP).—Ned Sparks, screen comedian, today won a legal tilt from his divorced wife, Mrs. Mercedes Sparks, when Superior Court ruled against her suit to obtain a new property settlement.

April 9, Mrs. Sparks lost her fight to have her divorce from Sparks set aside.

Mrs. Sparks then filed to have a property settlement whereby she was given $15,000 set aside on the grounds Sparks earned approximately $300,000 during the six years of their married life. She asked half of the community property.

Metaxas Abolishes Political Parties

Athens, Aug. 12 (U.P.).—Premier Gen. John Metaxas, newly proclaimed military dictator of Greece, announced the abolition of political parties today.

Summoning the mayors of a majority of the important Greek towns to his office, Metaxas warned:

"If any of you belong to any political party, forget it. There are no more political parties in Greece."

Cutter Reaches Barrow, Bringing Eskimos Food

Barrow, Alaska, Aug. 12 (AP).—The Coast Guard cutter Northland arrived off shore today with emergency food supplies for 200 or more Eskimos near starvation at points to the eastward. The flour, beans and sugar were hastily brought ashore for relay eastward in small boats.

No new deaths except that of one native had been reported, but Dr. Henry W. Creist, Presbyterian medical missionary, said many were on the edge of starvation.

About The Showshops

THE most interesting brochure of the season is the one descriptive of the "Malvern Festival, 1936," which reached this desk yesterday with the compliments of Morris Gest, distinguished American producer and son-in-law of the late David Belasco.

BELL.

This is no ordinary, advertising "throw-away," but an 84-page, handsomely illustrated, plate-paper booklet devoted to the English Festival program for this year, which embraces such works as George Bernard Shaw's "Saint Joan," "On the Rocks" and "Pygmalion;" David Garrick and George Colman's "The Clandestine Marriage," John Davison's "The Brontes of Haworth Parsonage," Helen Jerome's "Jane Eyre" and S. I. Hsiung's "Lady Precious Stream."

Contributors to the souvenir booklet include Shaw, John Drinkwater, memorable as that strange anomaly, a British dramatic biographer of Abraham Lincoln; Roy Limbert, director of the Festival; Helen Jerome, author of the dramatic adaptation of Jane Austen's "Pride and Prejudice," one of last season's hits which had its premiere in the National Theater in this city, and of Charlotte Bronte's "Jane Eyre," in which Katharine Hepburn is to be seen on the stage early next season; Sir Cedric Hardwicke, knighted English actor principally known to American audiences through his work in Gaumont British and other London-made films; John Davison, James Bridie, Hsiung and others of similar brilliance of intellect and achievement.

Since Miss Hepburn now is presenting a mildly controversial screen portrait of the hapless Mary Stuart, Queen of Scots, in the title role of the admirable film version of Maxwell Anderson's blank-verse drama of "Mary of Scotland"—without the blank verse—and since, later on, she is to come to the stage of the National in "Jane Eyre," it is peculiarly interesting to note what the author of the play of "Pride and Prejudice" has to say of the Bronte fiction as a basis of sound drama calculated to pique the curiosity and intrigue the interest of modern playgoers.

After having passed over lightly the chagrin of certain segments of the British public and press at her "audacity" is presuming to introduce Jane Austen to the contemporary theater, Miss Jerome bids us:

"Consider the story of 'Jane Eyre'! Packed with drama and the stuff of dreams, written in the most limpid, flowing, jeweled prose. 'Leave it in the library,' shrill the Inaccessibles. Why? What is wrong with the theater? Why is its medium considered so unworthy and undeserving as the milieu for a tale to become a classic? Must a classic, to deserve the name, be eternally wrapped in moth balls?

"Jane Eyre is a greater, more poignant, more enthralling love story than was ever 'Romeo and Juliet' or 'Heloise and Abelard,' because it has the beauty of the Quick rather than that of the Dead. Never was there a more vital, burning, passion-torn pair of lovers! All Charlotte Bronte's starved, frustrated, passionate heart and genius-stored brain are here—gloriously, lyrically here!"

Any playwright approaching his task with such enthusiasm as this over his source material, hardly can fail to translate to the stage something of the greatness which he conceives to be in the original work. Miss Jerome did it in "Pride and Prejudice" and bids fair to shatter precedent by repeating the feat in her second play of importance to reach the American theater.

It may prove an even greater test of the inherent power and charm of Miss Hepburn's unusual endowments than "Mary of Scotland," her most ambitious undertaking to date.

• • • •

All this recalls Max Gordon's unbridled enthusiasm over "Pride and Prejudice" when he was here last season prior to the opening of that splendid play at the National. To this column he confided that he deemed the Helen Jerome dramatization of the Jane Austen novel the most important undertaking he ever had essayed in the theater. His confidence in it was unbounded, with what soundness subsequent events have amply proved. The Theater Guild seems to have fallen under the contagion of his enthusiasm.

• • • •

The new issue of "The March of Time," announced as an added attraction on the bill with "Mary of Scotland," at RKO-Keith's beginning tomorrow, concerns itself with three topics of interest, two of which are distinctly native to this country. The three items are the "Revolt of the Southern sharecroppers," the "growth and development of the automobile trailer" and "Albania," the little country to the north of Greece, where Mussolini now is said to hold the purse strings.

The "sharecroppers" clip of the new film traces the causes of the unrest, points out the effects of the depression in the domain of "King Cotton" and shows the expansion of the Southern Tenant Farmers' Union. Those who objected to the squalid realism of "Tobacco Road" may find something to think about here.

As to the second subject, few realize—especially those living in Washington—that today 500,000 Americans are living in trailers, half of them permanently. Here are disclosed the origin of the trailer and its rapid growth in popularity.

If all were as luxurious as those I have seen pictured as the playthings of the stars of Hollywood, this trailer business wouldn't be so hard to take!

• • • •

It may be recalled that following the critical preview of "To Mary—With Love," the screen play opening at the Palace tomorrow, it was reported that the ladies and gentlemen (sic) of the local drayma desks had almost come to blows in the violence of their disagreement over the integrity of the picture's denouement. Well, the controversial points of that closing sequence have been deemed so profoundly important by the management that a public ballot is to be taken on the matter when the film play opens. Ballots will be provided patrons of the Palace upon which they will be expected to commit themselves as to whether Myrna Loy should have followed the course she did, or divorced Warner Baxter and married Ian Hunter. Go to it.

• • • •

A-Word-to-the-Wise-Etc., Note.

It would be a friendly tip to you married folks to go easy on this ballot-box committment until you have found out whether the other 49 per cent of your household knows how to write and, if so, if she, or he, has kept a purple diary!

Cheetah Teams With Baxter in 'White Hunter'

Dangerous Young 'Cat' Not an Office Favorite on His First Call.

By the United Press.

Hollywood, Aug. 12.—They laughed while casting a cheetah opposite Warner Baxter, but when the blond, lowbrowed cat strolled in to call, Producer Gene Markey and his staff leaped for the chandeliers.

"A mere cheetah," mused Markey, "doesn't seem dangerous and dashing enough for a big, strong fellow like Warner. Perhaps we had better change it to a black leopard."

Enter the Cat.

"Perhaps," agreed Boots McCracken, assistant director, "but the cheetah's on the lot. Let's go down and take a look at it."

"Yes," chimed in Karl Tunberg, production assistant. "Let's look at it—in its cage."

At that moment the office door wafted open and in undulated the cheetah, a dirty-yellow beast with maroon eyes, about the size of an airdale. Markey, McCracken and Tunberg dived over Markey's desk neck and neck. Only their heads were visible when Charles Kerr, animal trainer, followed the cheetah into the office. It was leading him on a little leather string.

"Gentle as a kitten, gentlemen," said Kerr, and by way of confirmation the cheetah sat down and snarled dentally at the moviemen.

"Dangerous When Young."

Entered the official animal sharp, Maj. C. Court Treat, formerly stationed with the British army in Africa, and eyed the cheetah benevolently.

"A bit young," he commented. "They're dangerous when young."

"We were thinking of changing it to a black leopard, major," quivered Markey.

"Um. Can't do it. Black leopards live in Indo-China, not Africa. Besides, you can never trust a leopard."

"Then let's have the cheetah. By all means, the cheetah," said Markey hastily.

"Quite. But don't feel badly about it, old chap," reassured the major. "A cheetah's a sort of leopard."

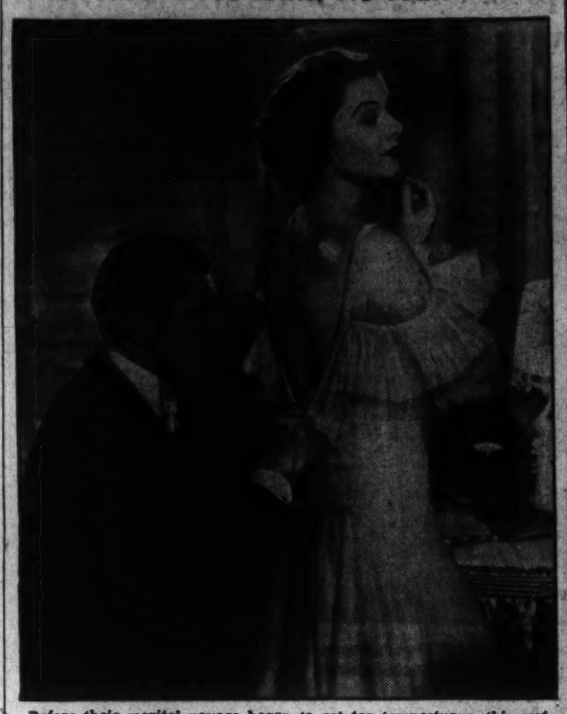
"Greater Love Hath No Man——"



Before their marital voyage began to get too tempestuous, this sort of thing was common in the home life of the Wallaces. Jock was on the way up into the big money and his bride, Mary, was ecstatically happy. Indeed, Jock was so in love that he actually enjoyed "hooking her up." Then came the crash! What happened after that is what makes "To Mary—With Love" one of the most engaging screen romances of the season. Warner Baxter and Myrna Loy, as you can plainly see, are the co-stars. It opens tomorrow at Loew's Palace Theater.

Standing Up "Jags" Cost More in Court

Norfolk, Va., Aug. 12.—A resident of Norfolk who drinks more than he should can save $2 by lying down when he sees a policeman approaching.

Police Justice Clyde Jacob fines a drunken man $5 if he is able to walk and only $3 if he has "passed out" when the law reaches him.

"A man still able to stagger about can cause more trouble," Judge Jacobs explains, "but if he's flat on his back and sleeping he won't harm anyone."

New Week Will Rechristen Fox Loew's Capitol

Fine Bills, Both New and Old, Mark Impending Entertainment.

Tomorrow, with elaborate ceremonies attending the event, Loew's Fox Theater officially will become Loew's Capitol Theater. The "unveiling" of the new Neon sign proclaiming the new name to the world will enlist the participation of distinguished Washington officialdom, will be attended by special music and will reach distant listeners-in over the radio. The entertainment features for the week beginning tomorrow at the Capitol are headed by Robert Montgomery in "Piccadilly Jim," on the screen, and Gene Ford's fourth annual "Going Native" revue, on the stage. The picture includes Madge Evans, Frank Morgan, Cora Witherspoon, Billie Burke, Eric Blore, Ralph Forbes and many others of note in its cast and is a romantic comedy of the first order. "Going Native" will have Gordon Hittenmark as its star and master of ceremonies, supported by a large cast of Washingtonians, featuring Shirley Schwartz, "Miss Capitol" of 1936. Fox Movietone News and Phil Lampkin's orchestra will round out the bill.

"Meet Nero Wolfe" is the feature picture announced for the week beginning tomorrow at the Warner Brothers' Earle Theater. Edward Arnold is cast in the title role, that of a detective who never leaves his own apartment to solve murder mysteries, and is supported by a large and competent cast led by Lionel Stander, Russell Hardie, Joan Perry, Victor Jory, John Qualen, Nana Bryant and numerous others. The story concerns the solution of two baffling murder mysteries which pose a pretty problem for the principals and the audience to wrestle with. On the stage the program will be headlined by that popular hill-billy quartet composed of Pappy, Zeb, Ezra and Elton. Other acts will be contributed by Arren and Broderick, in "Opera in the Rough," and Bartlett and Hurst, "Dance Sophisticates." Paramount News and Freddie Clark's orchestra added.

Warner Baxter and Myrna Loy, co-starred for the first time since "Broadway Bill," are the pictured stars of "To Mary—With Love," one of the most interesting romantic dramas of the year, announced as chief feature of the bill at Loew's Palace Theater for the week beginning tomorrow. Ian Hunter, Claire Trevor, Jean Dixon and Paul Hurst are prominent in the support. The story concerns itself with ten vital years in the lives of a young married couple. Auxiliary attractions will include a new Mickey Mouse cartoon comedy, "Master Will Shakespeare," based on the life of the bard, and a new release of the Metrotone News.

"Mary of Scotland," RKO-Radio's superb picturization of the stage play by Maxwell Anderson, will begin its second week of capacity business at RKO-Keith's Theater tomorrow, with Katharine Hepburn and Fredric March co-starred and a brilliant cast headed by Florence Eldridge, John Carradine, Douglas Walton, Donald Crisp, Alan Mowbray, Ian Keith and scores more in support. As an added attraction for the second week of the run, the latest issue of "The March of Time" will be shown, beginning tomorrow.

"Satan Met a Lady," co-starring Bette Davis and Warren William, will continue on the screen at the Metropolitan Theater throughout the remainder of the current week. This amusing comedy-drama, in the manner of the same author's "The Thin Man," will be succeeded by the Warner Brothers' picturization of Marc Connelly's Biblical fable of "The Green Pastures," now at the Earle, featuring Rex Ingram as De Lawd, supported by an all-Negro cast.

Jean Harlow, Franchot Tone and Cary Grant will occupy the screen of Loew's Columbia Theater for the week beginning tomorrow in "Suzy," the romance of wartimes recently seen on the screen at the Fox. The story is one of espionage and aviation. The bill will be completed by the usual supplementary short-reels.

Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers, pictured as costars of "The Gay Divorcee," will continue to pack the Little heater throughout the remaining days of the current week. A new bill will be announced for Sunday.

"Sherlock Holmes," a revival of the famous old melodrama by William Gillette, will be presented through a second week, beginning Monday, at the Roadside Theater. Betty Gray, Harrold Weinberger, who also directed, George Farrington, Fred Haskins, jr., and Adele Gusack have the leading roles.

Shakespeare's famous summertime fantasy, "A Midsummer Night's Dream," will be presented for the third consecutive season in the National Sylvan Theater on next Tuesday night, Aug. 18. This will be the tenth Summer Festival program under the direction of the Community Center Department and Office of National Capital Parks. The cream of Washington's resident players will be seen in the principal roles.

Replete With Beer, Nero Fiddles!

If not "fiddling," at least the newest of the fictional sleuth's, Mr. Nero Wolfe seems not to be engulfed in any of the more serious aspects of life and criminology. The rotund gentleman impersonating the central character in "Meet Nero Wolfe," it seems needless to say, is Edward Arnold, who finds a fine outlet for his talents in this new Columbia Pictures production, opening on the screen tomorrow at the Warner Brothers' Earle Theater. He is handsomely supported by a clever cast in a mystifying melodrama.

Hollywood

Hollywood, Aug. 12.

A few more sketches of the men who direct the pictures, so that when their names appear on the credit slides you'll feel that you have been introduced to them.

BETTE DAVIS.

George Cukor: He directed, among many hits, "David Copperfield," and his latest picture is "Romeo and Juliet." He is dark, wears glasses, is of medium height—about 5 feet 9—but appears to be shorter because of his great girth. He weighs over 200 pounds.

On the set he gives his best instructions between "takes." He prefers to talk to the players then. His main purpose, he insists, is to remove any trace of self-consciousness. He seldom gets excited before an audience. He believes that the important thing in the direction of a picture is the selection of the cast. Then there is a reading of the scenario, similar to the first reading of a play by the cast. He wants the players to understand thoroughly what they're supposed to feel.

• • • •

Cukor actually started his theatrical career as a director with the Rochester Stock Company. He was never an actor. He was once a super with an opera troupe, but he doesn't broadcast it.

Looking at the rushes in the projection room, you can tell what Cukor thinks of the picture as it rolls along. At the end of each scene, on the sound track, there is a Cukor comment. He can be heard saying: "Good. Good," or "That's bad. Very bad."

• • • •

W. S. Van Dyke: He directed "San Francisco" and is now making "The Devil Is a Sissy." Van Dyke's face always appears to have a wind burn; he comes onto the set looking as if he had just come off a golf course. His direction is fast and furious, as if he were anxious to get back to a golf course.

There is no formality on a Van Dyke set. It's "Hello Kid" and "Hello Toots." Yet there is not the slightest doubt he is in complete charge, and what he says goes. He doesn't attempt to be authoritative. He is.

• • • •

Van Dyke believes in getting his performers to play a scene before they're too certain of what they're doing. He has a fierce temper. When he explodes, he yells louder than Jeanette MacDonald can sing.

• • • •

Archie Mayo: He directed "The Petrified Forest," and was a former Philadelphia shirt salesman. He used to tell gags to prospective customers to get them in a good mood to buy shirts. He started in pictures as a gag man.

Now, a top rank director, he employs the same method. He kids his performers to keep them in good humor; to make them believe he's a jolly fellow.

Rookie Troops Are Inducted By District Unit

Col. Oehmann Praises Work of Recruits at Indiantown Gap.

By Phillip J. Austensen.
A Staff Correspondent.

Indiantown Gap, Pa., Aug. 12.—Recruits of the 121st Engineer Regiment of Washington were inducted formally into the regiment today at the annual regimental day exercises.

In accordance with custom, the regiment was formed in a hollow square before the reviewing stand on the regimental parade ground here where the 121st is part of the annual encampment of the Twenty-ninth National Guard Division.

The recruits were marched to the center of the square, where they were welcomed by Col. John W. Oehmann, commanding officer, and then were read the history of the regiment by Maj. A. L. Smith, regimental chaplain. Capt. E. H. Walter, Regular Army instructor, also spoke.

Lauds Loyalty.

Col. Oehmann told the men the 121st Engineer Regiment was formed 13 years ago and since that time it has attended camps at various places and of many types, but that this encampment will involve work never before attempted by the regiment.

"We have a record of efficiency made in the past that has to be maintained," Col. Oehmann said. "I am not afraid of the loyalty or action of the regiment since its work the past several days has demonstrated that you came to camp with determination to equal or even excel the records of the past.

"I have not given you one ounce of loyalty that you have not returned with interest," the colonel said, referring to Capt. Walter's talk in which the captain had lauded the colonel for his loyalty to his men. "I trust that this mutual co-operation will continue."

Maj. Smith explained that an appropriation was granted in 1792 for the formation of a militia regiment. He detailed the history through the war of 1812, when the District militia held its line at Bladensburg together with the Maryland troops long after the regular troops had left.

Band Plays.

The regimental band, led by Warrant Officer Meyer N. Goldman, played the regimental song, "There Is Nothing That We Fear," from which the motto of the regiment, "Nihil timemus" (we fear nothing) is derived.

A review of the regiment by Col. Oehmann, with Lieut. Col. Julian S. Oliff commanding the troops, completed the ceremony.

The First Maryland Regiment, commanded by Col. D. John Markey, of Frederick, arrived in camp today and took over its area. The regiment had been participating with the Fifth Maryland in Ninety-first Infantry brigade activities at Camp Harry W. Nice, Cascade, Md.

The Fifth Maryland will be brought to camp here tomorrow from Camp Nice and complete the concentration of the division as a unit for the first time since the World War.

All Virginia officers of the division will be guests of Brig. Gen. Samuel Gardner Waller, commanding the Ninety-first Infantry Brigade, Virginia National Guard, tomorrow night at the "biggest barn in Pennsylvania," in which brigade headquarters have been established.

Many of the officers have not had an opportunity to chum together since their border days and World War days.

The First Virginia and the 116th Virginia Infantry will oppose each other in a combined attack and defense problem tomorrow.

The staff of the Forty-fourth National Guard Division of New Jersey, headed by Maj. Gen. Winfield S. Price, will arrive in camp here tomorrow morning at 8:30 o'clock to inspect the camp and the layout of the troops. The Forty-fourth has just completed maneuvers at Sea Girt, N. J.

Search for Paul Redfern Planned by Mining Man

Berkeley, Calif., Aug. 12 (AP).—Lee R. Dennison, South American mining man, said today he planned within 90 days to lead an airpine expedition in serch of the wreckage of the plane of Paul Redfern, Georgia aviator, who disappeared in 1927 on a flight to Rio de Janeiro.

Dennison said he believes Redfern is dead, despite tales told him by Indians along the Amazon River that a red-haired white man was living with Indians. Dennison said he will use two planes in the search, and plans to fly over the area west of the Yauiyaingtepui mountains near the Brazilian border.

Mt. St. Joseph's Coach Is Slugged by Prowler

Baltimore, Aug. 12 (AP).—John McNally, former Western Maryland College football star, now grid coach at Mount St. Joseph's College, was slugged and seriously injured early today by a colored prowler at a Baltimore County swimming pool.

Physicians treated McNally for skull injuries and concussion of the brain, and said his condition was fair. He is in a hospital here.

Johnson, described by officals as her jealous suitor, disappeared after her body, the throat slashed with a butcher knife, was found on the lawn of her home yesterday.

William J. Bachand, third person in the triangle, was held as a material witness for the inquest tomorrow. Bachand, of New York City, fel lin love wit hthe attractive Oriental during a recent bus trip from New York to Los Angeles, it was said.

He told authorities Johnson, infuriated because he planned to marry Miss Takaoka, stabbed him with an ice pick Monday night.

Maureen O'Sullivan Will Wed Producer

Dublin, Irish Free State, Aug. 12 (AP).—The Irish film actress, Maureen O'Sullivan, is engaged to marry John Farrow, movie producer and scenario writer, her father, Maj. Charles O'Sullivan, announced today.

The ceremony will take place in Dublin on a date yet to be determined. He stated a speical dispensation for the marriage had been granted by the Vatican after the couple had waited two years for it.

Protest to Japan Waits Spy Trial Of Farnsworth

State Department to Decide Later Whether to Make Representations.

The question of whether the State Department will make official representation to Japan regarding an alleged spy plot here will remain undecided until the outcome of the Farnsworth trial, it was learned last night.

Officially, the State Department refused comment, as the Associated Press reported from Tokyo that the indictment returned here Tuesday against former Lieut. Comdr. John S. Farnsworth, mentioning the names of two Japanese officers, was "admittedly embarrassing" to Japan.

From other sources, however, it was learned that the State Department is awaiting the outcome of the Farnsworth trial before it decides whether or not to make official representations.

The indictment returned here charged Farnsworth with plotting to sell American naval secrets to Japan and named Commander Yosiyuki Itimiya and Lieut. Comdr. Okira Yamaki, former assistant naval attache in this city, as fellow conspirators. Both Japanese officers have returned to Japan.

The Associated Press reported from Tokyo a Japanese navy spokesman stated that the situation is "admittedly embarrassing."

The spokesman acknowledged that the two officers named were associated with the Japanese navy and had formerly served in Washington.

He said, however, the Associated Press reported, that "in America, as in Japan and elsewhere, there are always unscrupulous persons trying to sell foreign attaches worthless information.

"Although our hands are clean in these cases," the spokesman added, "stories published in America are admittedly embarrassing to the Japanese navy."

It was pointed out last night that though the Japanese officers were named in the bill, they were not indicted. Officials took the view that they were protected by diplomatic immunity.

Labor In Politics.

In his autobiography Samuel Gompers explains that although he openly urged the election of William Jennings Bryan in 1896, he steadfastly opposed letting the labor movement be "annexed by a political party." "I refused," he said, "to lead them into a policy from which it would take decades to recover."

President Green, like his predecessor, is personally committed to advocacy of a Democratic candidate for President but opposed to indorsement of that candidacy by the federation. It may be charged that his attitude has been influenced by the personal rivalries that have split the federation. But, like Mr. Gompers, he can point out that he is the responsible head of an organized group, put there to represent their interests rather than to commit them to any party or candidate.

The influence of the American Federation of Labor has always been much greater than the voting strength of its membership precisely because it devoted its attention to issues, not men, policies and programs, not parties. Formally committed to no party, its spokesmen could address all political aspirants with assurances of a respectful hearing. Labor's demands were as a result met in some degree no matter which party happened to be victorious at the polls.

Unless, or until, organized labor becomes identified with a third party movement strong enough to obtain what it wants by independent political action, the neutral policy which Samuel Gompers followed with such success, and which he handed down to his successor in office, will remain the wise policy. President Green's qualities of leadship cannot be criticized on the score of his clinging to the tradition of nonpartisanship.

The Roots Of Espionage.

The new indictment of John S. Farnsworth, on a charge of conspiring with two former assistant naval attaches of the Japanese Embassy, raises some far-reaching considerations regarding the quest of governments for military and naval information in foreign countries. If Farnsworth betrayed secrets of the United States Navy to Japanese officials, he is guilty of a most serious offense. On the other hand, it is not easy to define the proper limitations upon the function of military and naval officers sent here by other countries for the admitted purpose of obtaining information on the American defense program.

Japanese spokesmen in Tokyo admit that it is "embarrassing" to have two former assistant naval attaches here named as conspirators in a plot to obtain American naval secrets. If the charge can be proved, the situation will become all the more embarrassing. Yet it can not be fairly assumed that Tokyo authorities sanctioned this particularly bungling resort to espionage. Unless the trial of Farnsworth should prove otherwise, the burden of responsibility for this episode will fall squarely upon his shoulders.

Unfortunately there is no very clear demarcation between the legitimate collection of information by foreign military and naval attaches and the sort of conspiracy of which the two Japanese envoys are indirectly accused. The primary function of the army and navy officers attached to most embassies, our own included, is to obtain information regarding the national defense programs of the countries to which they have been accredited. They are, of course, under pressure from their governments to obtain all the data available. That very fact puts a premium upon the use of methods which would doubtless be publicly repudiated by the government for which the information is sought.

Obviously, therefore, these charges should not give rise to any particular resentment against Japan. The State Department does not appear to have made any representations to Tokyo in the matter. It has been suggested that the Farnsworth case is being pressed at this time to coincide with the forthcoming visit of the Japanese training squadron at Annapolis, thus to emphasize the American distaste for peace-time espionage of this sort. But that would not be necessary to explain why there is desire to make an example of Farnsworth as a warning to any citizen who might be tempted to betray the military secrets of his country.

So long as the present system exists, casional cases of detected spying can be expected. And even if the office of military attache should be abolished by all nations, the quest for military information would probably continue in an even more invidious manner. In the circumstances, vigorous prosecution of conspirators trying to sell military secrets seems to be the most effective course. If the racket is thoroughly exposed, governments will be subject to much greater pressure to hold their agents in check and thus avoid the embarrassment which Tokyo is now experiencing.

Our Worthless Neutrality Act.

So far as it goes, the stand taken by the State Department with respect to the Spanish crisis is eminently sound and entirely praiseworthy. Unfortunately it does not, and because of inadequate neutrality laws, cannot go far enough.

In a communication to all American consular and diplomatic representatives in Spain, Acting Secretary Phillips declared that the United States will "scrupulously refrain from any interference whatsoever in the unfortunate Spanish situation." He also expressed the hope and belief that American citizens will conduct themselves similarly.

It is to be hoped that they will. But legally there is nothing to prevent them from aiding either side in the Spanish conflict by selling arms, munitions and airplanes. The neutrality act of 1936, which prohibits the sale of arms to combatants, applies only in the case of a war between or among nations, not to civil wars. Whatever pressure the Government may seek to exert to prevent such sales to the contending elements within Spain can only be of the moral variety.

Thus far this moral pressure has not been without effect. In at least two instances, it seems, American airplane manufacturers who were approached to sell their wares to Spaniards refrained from doing so when the State Department, whose advice they sought, frowned upon such action. But whether this moral pressure will suffice is by no means certain. The appeals made by President Roosevelt and Secretary Hull to American exporters at the time the Italo-Ethiopian war broke out did not prevent a sharp rise in the sale of oil and other basic munitions to Italy.

Should the Spanish civil war continue for any length of time the fear of incurring the State Department's disapproval might be outweighed by the desire to profit from the eagerness of the combatants to acquire arms and ammunition and their readiness to pay any price for them. In that case the American Government would find itself in the helpless position of being unable to prevent citizens of this country from upsetting a European non-intervention agreement that alone can keep the Spanish struggle localized. The moral onus of having assisted transformation of the Spanish civil war into a general conflict would clearly rest on us. Nor can we be at all sure that should such a conflict arise we should be able to keep clear of it.

War clouds have been gathering in Europe for some time. It was this fact, and the overwhelming desire of the American people to stay out of another European war, should it arise, that led to the demand that adequate neutrality legislation should be placed on the statute books. But after months of emotional debate, in Congress and out, a measure was approved that had no relation whatever to realities. Despite clear warning signals that the next European war might arise out of a revolutionary coup, the measure was made to read as though 1936 were 1914, and emphasis was placed on hampering essential Executive discretion in the application of the act.

There is now further evidence, if any were needed, that Congress has utterly bungled the neutrality problem. The neutrality legislation now on the statute books would not suffice to keep us out of any world conflict. Nor does it empower the Department of State to pursue a policy in the Spanish situation which would further neutrality without the slightest sacrifice of American interests or American rights. It is again being demonstrated that the present neutrality act is not only utterly inadequate but also has vast potentialities of danger both to us and to the world.

A Weak Showing.

Townsendism suffered an emphatic setback in the Idaho and Arkansas primary elections. Both Senators Borah and Robinson achieved easy victories against candidates holding out the glittering promise of $200-per-month pensions. That lure seems to have attracted a majority of votes only where there was no substantial opposition.

Kansas voters even more emphatically rejected Townsendism, in spite of the fact that the leader of the movement staged a rabble-rousing campaign in that State for three days before the primary ballots were cast. Every candidate he pleaded for, except one, was defeated.

The Townsendites did make some rather striking gains. On a platform indorsing both the munificent pension scheme of the California doctor and the defunct Florida ship canal, Charles O. Andrews won the Democratic nomination for Senator in Florida. Apparently the opposition of former Gov. Carlton was weak. And the forces which made Florida's disastrous real estate bubbles possible a few years ago must still be in operation. Even so, the Townsendite won by a small margin.

A margin of 13 votes gave a Townsend supporter, Richard M. Atkinson, the Democratic nomination for the congressional seat formerly occupied by Speaker Byrns. Had the late Speaker lived to challenge the nostrum, it is inconceivable that Townsendism would thus have been indorsed. Representative White was renominated by Democrats of the First Congressional District of Idaho without opposition. He, also, supported the California pension scheme. In each case effective opposition might have produced very different results.

Where Townsendites have won, however, it is a mistake to assume that their election is assured in November. The experience of Upton Sinclair and his EPIC plan in California is a perfect illustration of what usually happens when Utopians capture the nomination of a major party. The level-headed elements in both parties combine to defeat such a candidate in the final election.

Several Townsendite candidates who are now riding high upon the tides of victory are likely to be found wrecked upon the rocks of such inter-party co-operation when the votes are counted in November.

The Evolution Of WPA.

Early in 1935, when President Roosevelt outlined his plans for a work-relief program to supersede the FERA, he stated emphatically that payments to relief labor should not be "so large as to encourage the rejection of opportunities for private employment or the leaving of private employment to engage in public work." He further said that projects should be located where they would "serve the greatest employment needs as shown by present relief rolls and the broad program of the National Resources Board should be freely used for guidance in selection."

Today the President is strongly defending a work-relief policy that virtually precludes any long-time planning by setting a time limit to the completion of projects. Long since the Administration surrendered to political pressure to pay prevailing rates on relief jobs, and under the present relief legislation Congress has decreed the continuance of this policy.

However, the President, still a step ahead, is now arguing that the WPA is justified in paying higher than prevailing rates for certain kinds of labor in areas where employers are said to be unwilling to offer a fair subsistence wage based upon American standards of living. This new conception of WPA as an agency for elevating standards of pay to the levels considered fair by Federal officials would be staggering were it not for the progressive abandonment of the various relief principles enunciated by the President at the inception of the program.

Under the new relief policy, and the regulations governing the disposition of the PWA appropriation, the President's original plans for combining relief of employment with useful activities offering as little competition as possible with private industry have suffered further disintegration.

Orders that PWA workers shall be taken exclusively from relief rolls, and that all labor on local projects shall be drawn from nearby regions, have resulted in a virtual absorption of the PWA by the WPA. Fortunately the President has now decided to modify these rigid rules to permit labor to be drafted from outside areas in case of a local shortage of skilled men. Since the Federal Employment Service is equipped to provide information as to employment openings in other communities, shifting labor needed for particular kinds of projects should not be difficult. Obviously, if the Government is primarily concerned to reduce relief rolls, geographical lines should be ignored in bringing the unemployed into contact with the jobs, on public as well as private projects.

But, in spite of such modifications all the emphasis is placed upon the necessity of taking men off relief, whatever the means employed, and paying them at rates that bear little or no relation to the value of the service, thus frequently putting a premium upon useless or at least nonessential work. Such a policy is calculated to build up relief rolls instead of encouraging a shift to private employment, and this disposition will certainly be greatly strengthened by the insidious transformation of local WPA relief organizations into self-appointed agencies for elevating standards of work and wages.

If American living standards are jeopardized, as the President says, by an influx of Mexicans or French-Canadians into this country, protection may be needed. But the WPA is certainly not the proper agency for deciding how much protection is required, and determining the form in which it shall be given.

There was a time when WPA officials hotly resented charges that they were keeping men from private employment. Now the President himself not only admits the facts but upholds the practice of overbidding private employers as a means of raising local wage standards. It is time for the country to take notice, consider the implications of such a program, and demand a return to reasonable relief principles which Mr. Roosevelt once espoused, and has now apparently forgotten.

The reason why the average American so jealously guards his right to say what he pleases is because he entertains the hope that some day he will reach the point where he can afford to do so.

Pity the poor movie actresses. They fall into so much trouble of front-page magnitude when they are giving birth to a picture soon to be released.

It is advisable to use more salt during a heat wave, especially if a political campaign is running concurrently.

Rep. Zioncheck's Case.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your editorial in The Post of August 9, "A Doubly Tragic Event," analyzes accurately the regrettable situation which brought about the tragic death of Representative Marion A. Zioncheck.

The system or lack of system of handling such obvious cases of unbalanced mentality is deplorable in a country so advanced and rich as ours. With all the advancement in science, medicine and the arts which we have made we still behave, under the skin, like barbarians when it comes to taking care of our unfortunate citizens.

Two men, however, do stand out as Mr. Zioncheck's friends in the turmoil that eventually led to his tragic death. They are Mr. Kenneth Romney, sergeant at arms of the House of Representatives, and Representative Tom Blanton of Texas, who were instrumental in arranging for his transportation to Seattle to see his sick mother. Had there been more such men in his life during the early part of the past seven months he would have been on some peaceful farm regaining his health and strength and would now be back again in harness where he belonged and where he proved his worth and ability.

STANLEY J. KAPA.
Washington, Aug. 9.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Please accept my appreciation of your editorial in The Post of August 9 on the late Representative Zioncheck. It is indeed a tragedy for so young a life and career to be sacrificed so needlessly.

It is a difficult task to place a loved one under subjection, but it is absolutely necessary in mental illness. Just as the surgeon uses the knife in correcting a wrong condition in the body, so the psychiatrist advises subjection for mental ills. This was done in Mr. Zioncheck's case, but not properly carried out. Had his subjection been maintained for a proper period, there is no doubt that his life would have been spared and he returned to society for a continued life of usefulness.

See And Raise Again.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I should like to take this means of accepting the challenge extended me by Mr. Mason, Mr. James and the "Fearful One" in their letters published in The Post on August 7.

My counter challenge is that we meet in a public debate at which time I shall answer the accusations, all of which were either false or distorted, made against me in the said letters. Such a discussion should be very pleasing to the gentlemen as it will afford them the opportunity of publicly revealing their true identity, which they so cleverly conceal in their letters, and they can at that time give vent to their wrath against the New Deal.

If difficulty is encountered in making arrangements for this public discussion, I shall be glad to make the necessary arrangements. When and if the gentlemen accept my challenge, I shall expect them to be prepared to compare their sincerity of purpose, their loyalty and service to country, and their patriotism with mine. I shall also expect them to be able to prove that my job depends upon the re-election of Mr. Roosevelt.

Mr. Avery's Judgment.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Isn't it about time someone told Avery Brundage that he is not the living embodiment of the Olympic ideal. Slights to him as an individual do not constitute an offense punishable by athletic exile, as he seems to believe. It is only too apparent, however, that he was the logical choice of an official to be in charge at Berlin. His temperament is so nearly identical with the Prussian philosophy.

Mrs. Jarrett was a popular figure in the sporting world. Her popularity, as a champion, was an asset to Olympic activities in the past. Even granting the lack of judgment of her conduct aboard ship, her services to the Olympic cause entitled her to much more considerate treatment than she received. Mr. Brundage's further action against Mrs. Jarrett is vindictive on the face of it, a gratuitous and unnecessary ruling because Mrs. Jarrett was about to return to America and was not participating in amateur activities abroad.

Mr. Brundage would be more at home managing the exhibition of livestock at a county fair. In the adult competition at Berlin he is displaying very immature judgment.

Mary Astor's Future.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: What will Will Hays, the Legion of Decency and the producers do about Mary Astor and her admissions in her case now in court? "Dodsworth," in which Miss Astor has a prominent part, will soon be finished. If presented to the public, will it be regarded as a vindication of Mary Astor? S. A. PALMER.

The "American System."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: What do the Republican politicians mean when they say "We advocate a return to the American system of government"? Gov. Landon, in his much-praised, much-criticized speech of acceptance, propounded the question to his admiring audience in Topeka, Kans., "Shall we delegate more and more power to the Chief Executive or shall we return to the American system of government?" In his own acceptance speech a few days later in Chicago Col. Knox sounded forth in the same general tone the Republican strategy of this political campaign. Many other conferees of the same political line-up have this battle cry upon their lips. But what true Americans want to know is the form of government these self-styled Americans claim is the American system.

First, they imply that a strong Federal Government is un-American, when the facts show the opposite to be true. Perhaps no other single man in American history had more influence on the framing of the Constitution and in shaping the political destiny of this Nation than Alexander Hamilton and he was a great proponent of the strong central government. Washington, another great American, thought enough of his philosophy of government to make Hamilton one of his closest advisers and a member of his first cabinet. Jefferson was a believer of the States' rights theory of government, which the Republicans this year have so ignominously espoused as being the only American system. That system is American, but put together all of the conglomeration of generalities that have been uttered by the Republicans this season and you will find that all they have said is that Jefferson was more American than Hamilton, which simply is not true.

The history of the Supreme Court will contradict this Republican argument, for many of its decisions in the past have leaned definitely toward a stronger centralized government. Contrariwise, many of them have tended toward recognizing more sovereignty in the individual State. These decisions clearly indicate that the Constitution is broad enough to be interpreted either way, depending upon the exigency the situation demands for the best interests of the people as a whole. If the claim is made that passing laws through Congress which were later declared unconstitutional was un-American, how can the Republicans assure the American people that they will pass laws which will not be declared unconstitutional?

Or is their contention that the New Deal is alien based upon the fact that so many Federal bureaus were set up to handle the emergency created by the depression? Not a single instance do they show where the problem could have been handled by the individual State. Local relief had broken down; the farmers' market was not intrastate but interstate. Even crime is interstate. Would the Republicans turn all of these and other problems back to the individual State? Or would they draw the line? They do not know and they do not say.

Indigent Dogs.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: To W. E. D.'s good letter in The Post of August 8, please let me add that Hagerstown's mayor and city council, August 6, ordered our police to investigate and report on similar city dog troubles here. For why should indigents keep dangerous, useless, invasive city dogs, when food wasted on them would feed many useful, eatable, egg-laying hens?

Ought dogless taxpayers be forced to furnish (through welfare relief pensions) food for these flea-breeding, disease spreading, filthy curs many indigents keep?

Why not increase city dog taxes to $5 or $10 each per year, so they are worth collecting and the number of dog keepers will correspondingly decrease?

Contrary View On The Olympics.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have been a daily reader of The Post for the past 27 years—since January, 1909—and have always enjoyed reading your esteemed paper, which I consider, editorially and otherwise, splendidly written. Yet, in my perusal of The Post, I have never been more amused than by the letter in your issue of August 10, by Capt. G. E. Harriman.

Being apparently endowed with a marvellously prophetic mind, Mr. Harriman enlightens the entire American nation of the dire things which will happen in the United States, Germany and, in fact, all over the world, after the visiting athletes have returned from Berlin to their native countries. He points out to us what a dismal failure the Olympic games, at present held in Berlin, are, and what terrible disappointments they have brought to the Germans in general and to the Berlin population in particular.

To be sure, all the reports and dispatches regarding the Olympics sent to us by the representatives of the Associated Press, the United Press and other news agencies, together with the daily broadcasts by the official radio announcers in Berlin of our National and Columbia radio networks, emphasize enthusiastically the magnificence of the performances, the spontaneous applause and cheers which are freely awarded to each victor in the respective events by the population of Berlin and by the visiting throngs of foreigners. Even our own athletes, so frequently victors in this year's principal Olympic events, have personally testified to the wholehearted, cordial and hospitable reception and spontaneous recognition which the sport-loving and sportsmanlike people of Berlin have extended to them and to their victories. It is also a well known fact that Berlin and its suburbs are, since the latter part of July, overcrowded with visitors from the United States, Canada and from every country in Europe. One sports writer called Berlin recently a "city of foreigners."

But the brilliant mind of G. E. Harriman perceives in all this but a thin cover for a dismal failure, which—no one except Mr. Harriman knows why—spells peril to our social life and to our cherished liberties!

It is too bad that the Olympics do not include a contest for excellence in teamwork. G. E. Harriman and Westbrook Pegler would surely be the winning team.

The Siege Of Babel

Post Office, Thursday.

La Usona Kongreso ne estos la sola Kongreso kiu kunvenos en Vashingtono dum la sekvonta jaro. Tiu Kongreso estos la sepdekkvina de sia speco. Sed ankau kunvenos tie chi Norda Amerika Kongreso—Kongreso kiu, interalie, festos la kvindekan datrevenon de la unua publikigo de nova lingvo.

* * *

No, we're really feeling very well, thank you. No, the type hasn't been pied. Can't you see that that paragraph means something?

* * *

We are assured by H. B. Hastings that it means:

"The Congress of the United States will not be the only congress to assemble in Washington next year. That Congress will be the seventy-fifth of its special species. But there will also meet here a North American congress, a congress which will, among other things, celebrate the fiftieth anniversary of the first entry of a new language into publication."

In short, our strange, yet inherently half-familiar, introductory paragraph is devised in Esperanto. The Esperanto enthusiasts of this earth—and they are many thousands in number—are to hold high revel in the District of Columbia next year, a half century after Esperanto received the Gutenberg degree.

* * *

Scientific pursuit of a universal language—which, you'd imagine, unruly man would have started as soon as possible after the original confusion of tongues—didn't really get under way until long after the earliest searches for the North Pole. However, the last century saw the hounds in full cry. There was Solresol, in 1817—Lingualumina in '75. Cabeban followed not long later. Volapuk had its day in the court of international opinion.

But the court didn't approve. These experiments were too capricious. For any general use, they bore too strongly the stamp of their various inventors' individualities.

* * *

Esperanto, if we are to believe our Esperanto friends, is another kettle of fish—perhaps because L. L. Zamenhof, M. D., who made it, learned Russian beforehand. You see, he was born in Russia—and we have always contended that, to the child whose mother-tongue was Russian, Dutch, Chinese or Japanese, any other language would be all cakes and ale.

"The producer"—we're quoting a prejudiced witness, to be sure; but Joseph Leahy, general secretary of the Esperanto Association of North America, is an honorable man—"Dr. Zamenhof sought out the basic elements of the leading European languages and from them built up this simplified language. The root-words, thus gathered, carry with them the same background"—some job, carrying a background, yet Mr. Leahy assures us they perform it—"that animates them in the languages from which they are derived.

"Strip the tongues of Europe of their peculiarities," says Mr. Leahy, "their irregularities, unpronounceable sounds, illogical spellings, and eliminate the root-words not common to most of them—and you have Esperanto, the international language."

Well, of course, no spontaneous language has any "peculiarities"—for the people who are born to it. If its sounds were "unpronounceable," it would be a sign language. And the question of whether a given spelling is or is not "illogical" rests, in seven cases out of ten, with the alphabet of the particular language to which the given spelling is native: the fact that the alphabets of two languages possess the same characters is no evidence that those characters have the same sound in both languages. And who are we to say that one language sounds such and such a letter correctly—to the discredit of the other language?

However, we see what Mr. Leahy means. And you will be surprised when you find how many people in all walks of life, and all parts of the world, believe in Esperanto.

* * *

There have been universal languages: Greek, Latin, French. There was the lingua franca, almost the only good result of the Crusades. There's pidgin English. But these weren't made. They grew. Even Hindostani is more growth than manufacture.

Man seems to have an innate antipathy to a made language.

No, this columnist's uncertainty is unconcerned with the advantages of Esperanto over all its rivals, down to the schismatic Ido, the heretical Ro. Esperanto is simplicity itself. As the schoolboys sang to Edward VIII: "You can buy it for a penny; you can learn it in a week." Our uncertainty is concerned with the question: "Can everybody be made to spend the penny and give the week?"

The Post-Impressionist's doubt isn't so much a doubt of the sweet reasonableness of Esperanto. Esperanto is the essence of logic. What the Post-Impressionist doubts is the reasonableness of mankind.

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler.

Butch Klutch Cure.

If you would keep your respect for the mighty men—the big-name men—of our time in America do not inquire too closely.

I happen to have known in my comparatively short experience in New York a number of illustrious Americans who paid large sums to broken-down, old-time preliminary prize fighters and muscle-thumpers for advice which they had already received time and again from their own loving wives.

If a man is drinking too much, smoking too many cigars or cigarettes and getting too little sleep he doesn't feel well. He knows why he doesn't feel well, but his own judgment is free, so he doesn't respect it. His War Department, as wives sometimes are called in the prize fight business, also knows the remedy, but her advice is free, too. And, anyway, a man somehow may resent advice on these delicate matters from his War Department. So in many cases our illustrious American will go around among his friends complaining that his nerves are shaky and his digestion bad and wondering what to do. He wants store advice, not home brew.

• • • •

At this stage of his decline he comes upon a friend who has recently been up the country taking the cure. This friend tells him about the marvelous establishment of Dr. Butch Klutch—you remember Butch Klutch, the old-time middleweight, who trained Bob Fitzsimmons.

Well, old Butch is going on 85 now, and he is running a health camp up the country where he does marvels for middle-aged captains of industry whose nerves are shaky and their digestion not too good. Butch doesn't weigh a flake over 185 this very day, and although his hair is snow-white, he is lean and flat in the belly and his eye is clear and he can lick double his weight in cops, with no holds barred.

So our friend telephones Butch Klutch at his health camp up the country and is told that Dr. Klutch—he is a doctor now, with a mail-order diploma from a college of physical training—is unable to accommodate him this week, but can give him a room in the converted silo at the health camp ten days hence, provided he shoots in his check today to show his good faith.

So he shoots in his check for I don't know how much—maybe $200, maybe $500, maybe $5,000, according to his rating in the book and the length of time he can stay. And ten days later our friend shows up at Camp Klutch, which is a distorted farmhouse on a submarginal farm, with a suitcase in his hand and adventure in his heart. He is like a little boy going to boarding school, or a young man joining out for his first summer encampment with the militia. Whatever happens to him, he will take it in a manly spirit and be a sport.

By way of greeting, Dr. Klutch will slap the cigarette out of his hand, warning him that cigarettes mean expulsion from Camp Klutch, and let him know, with a hygienic glare of his clear, cold eyes, that he is not a privileged character here.

He will smoke one pipe or one cigar after lunch and dinner and one before going to bed, and if he violates the rule, out he goes, with no refund. He will eat his oatmeal or hay or sawdust for breakfast and his spinach and string beans and beets at lunch and dinner—and eat them all up, what's more—and there will be no seconds on the cookies and nobody may have coffee after dinner, because 9 o'clock is bedtime and everybody has got to go to sleep. In fact, they turn off the power at 9 o'clock so that nobody can read in bed, and there is a flycop making the rounds to sniff the air for tobacco smoke after hours.

And, of course, there will be no alcohol. No, not even beer. And not many sweets, either, and, moreover, everybody will rise and shine at half past 6 a. m. for calisthenics, followed by breakfast. Then comes a long walk or perhaps a bouncing around on a herd of animated sofas which were born to haul plows but missed their calling, and after that a rub and a nap and after that some work with the medicine ball and so forth. And fresh milk.

All this our friend the captain of industry could have done for himself at home, except the horse work, which could be simulated by a nickel ride in the street cars if he had had the will power to control his vices. He knew he ought to curtail his drinking and smoking, revise his hours and habits, stay home from work a few days and eat plenty of vegetables.

His War Department told him the same, but he didn't respect the advice until he received it from Dr. Klutch, at a high price, along with a program of insults and coercion. Nevertheless, he comes back from camp singing the praises of the remarkable Dr. Klutch—you remember Old Butch, the sparring partner who used to train Bob Fitzsimmons.

Anglo-Egyptian Pact On Territorials Ready

Alexandria, Egypt, Aug. 12 (AP).—The final section of a new Anglo-Egyptian treaty was completed today with the initialing of a clause regarding extraterritoriality of British subjects. It was announced that the formal ceremony of signing would be held in London August 27.

Although no details of the agreement were made public, political sources said it provided for gradual reduction of British military forces in Egypt after the Egyptian army is strengthened, increase in the British air force strength and creation of a British naval base at Alexandria.

It was understood Great Britain undertook to abolish extraterritoriality provided other powers agree simultaneously at a conference to be held in Cairo next January.

Impetus Expected In Movement After Federal And Private Commission Reports On Survey To Roosevelt Next Month.

By Herbert Plummer.
Associated Press Correspondent.

Fresh impetus is expected to be given the co-operative movement in this country when the American commission conducting an inquiry on co-operative enterprise in Europe reports to President Roosevelt in September.

The commission, headed by three men selected by the President and including five associate members representing governmental and private sources, is to investigate every phase of co-operatives abroad.

Co-operative activities in marketing, purchasing, housing, credit, banking, insurance and electrification are being studied. Co-ordination of co-operative activities, methods of operation, the place of consumers co-operation in the economic structure of the various countries visited, and the relation between consumers' and agricultural co-operative enterprises also will be a part of the report to be submitted to the President.

Although the development of co-operatives in the United States dates back 100 or more years and statistical information was collected by the Federal Government as early as 1900, it was not until 1914 that the first Nation-wide survey was undertaken.

Today it is estimated there are approximately 10,700 farmers' co-operative selling or buying associations in the United States. Up-to-date data on the number of strictly consumers' co-operatives is not available. There is a considerable blending of types, however, so that it is difficult to assert with finality to which type-group a particular association belongs.

The interest of the Federal Government in the field, however, is extensive. A number of Governmental agencies are concerned with co-operatives in one form or another. Outstanding are:

1. Consumers' division of the National Emergency Council.
2. Bureau of labor statistics of the Department of Labor.
3. The division of self-help co-operatives of the Federal Emergency Relief Administration.
4. The division of subsistence homesteads of the Resettlement Administration.
5. Tennessee Valley Authority.
6. Farm Credit Administration.
7. Rural Electrification Administration.

In addition, there are several organizations outside the Government working to advance co-operatives.

The Co-operative League of the United States of America, which acts as a central clearing house for co-operatives, is perhaps the most important. There are three district co-operative leagues—one each for the Central, Eastern and Northern States. Another is the National Credit Union Association.

Aside from the farmer co-operatives and urban associations, within the last three years self-help co-operatives have come increasingly into prominence.

Most of these have been organized or sponsored by the various relief agencies. Some are in the cities, others in the rural areas. Those in the country have been largely engaged in truck gardening and canning for home use.

Jobless Relief Is Major Issue In Ballot Drive

Both Parties Recognize It's Importance, But Differ As to Methods.

Copyright, 1936, by the United Press.

Republicans charge Democrats with waste and incompetence in providing work-relief. Democrats accuse Republicans of wanting another dole.

Regardless of a Democratic or Republican victory next November, this much is certain—Federal spending to care for unemployed needy will continue in some form.

Both President and Gov. Alf M. Landon are pledged to that policy. They also are together in seeking absorption of jobless by private industry as the only real solution to the problem.

But they disagree so widely on methods of feeding and clothing the estimated 15,700,000 persons now on relief pending that economic millenium that their differences provide an important problem for every voter to consider.

Obligation of Government.

The Democrats stand staunch behind the New Deal's two $5,425,000,000 programs to make work for all able-bodied unemployed. Their platform makes that plain in saying:

"We believe that unemployment is a national problem, and that it is an inescapable obligation of our Government to meet it in a national way. Due to our stimulation of private business, more than 5,000,000 people have been re-employed; and we shall continue to maintain that the first object of a program of economic security is maximum employment in private industry at adequate wages.

"Where business fails to supply such employment, we believe that work at prevailing wages should be provided in co-operation with the State and local government for useful public projects, to the end that the national wealth may be increased, the skill and energy of the worker may be utilized, his morale maintained and the unemployed assured the opportunity to earn the necessities of life."

The Republicans seek to shift administration responsibilities to States and localities, with the Federal Government supplying part of relief costs. They offer this platform plank:

"The necessities of life must be provided for the needy and hope must be restored pending recovery. The administration of relief is a major failure of the New Deal. It has been faithless to those who most deserve our sympathy. To end confusion, waste and incompetence, we pledge:

"1. The return of responsibility for relief administration to non-political local agencies familiar with community problems.

U. S. Grants to States.

"2. Federal grants in aid to the States while the need exists upon compliance with these conditions: (a) A fair proportion of the total relief burden to be provided from the revenues of State and local governments. (b) All employed in relief administration to be selected on the basis of merit and fitness. (c) Adequate provision to be made for the encouragement of those persons who are trying to become self-supporting.

"3. Undertaking of Federal public works only on their merit and separate from the administration on relief.

"4. A prompt determination of the facts concerning relief and unemployment."

The differences between the two parties' stand is illustrated concretely in a $19,000 dog pound built in Memphis, Tenn., under the New Deal's Work Progress Administration as part of its $4,000,000,000 job program.

The project cost the Government $13,000 and Memphis added $6,000. It is the latest thing in dog houses, has concrete wells, steel pens, a lethal gas chamber, runways and special provisions for bedding.

"You think this Passamaquoddy project is a sole exception and typical of the insensate spending orgy now going on?" Senator Daniel O. Hastings, a Republican spokesman from Delaware, asked on the floor of the Senate.

"I certainly wish I could live in as handsome a building as the Memphis, Tenn., dogs will occupy. The dogs will have individual pens with fresh bedding every day, exercise runways, showerbaths and every other imaginable comfort of home. These dogs are not valuable dogs, just strays."

Administration Explains.

The Administration met the work-relief issue Hastings raised. In a semi-official publication entitled "Boondoggling," it said:

"During the last three years, the Memphis Health Department has given 877 Pasteur treatments, mostly to children who had been bitten by mad dogs . . . six persons suffered horrible deaths from this cause.

"This project is sponsored by the City of Memphis, approved by its health department, the Memphis Humane Society, and demanded by civic bodies.

"The WPA contribution is intended to cover the labor costs, giving employment to 53 men for two months . . . funds which otherwise would have been necessitated for direct relief."

Relief costs provide Republicans with their main attack on New Deal policies. They can quote statistics showing that Federal dole grants to keep needy alive cost $2,605,701,296 in the 30 months and one week between May 23, 1933, when President Roosevelt organized his Federal emergency relief administration until December 1, 1935, when FERA closed down.

British People Back Roosevelt, Writer Asserts

Oxford Professor, on Visit to U. S., Not Sure of Victory, However.

England, fearing that any change may aggravate the present unrest in Europe, wants President Roosevelt to be re-elected and thinks he will be, Denis Brogan, Oxford professor, political observer and writer, declared yesterday.

"I'm not speaking for the Government, you understand, but for the English people as a whole," he pointed out. "They think that in the present world crisis it is unwise for another man to step into control. Their desire to see Roosevelt re-elected is not based on approval of the New Deal or on the Roosevelt program. Few Englishmen know much about that. They don't care. They aren't interested. But they do want as little change as possible."

Brogan, who several years ago wrote "Government of the People," considered one of the finest books ever published on American history, said that while he was in England he, too, thought Roosevelt would easily win a second term.

Not so Sure Now.

"But now that I've been here for a week I'm not so sure," he smiled.

With a broad grasp of the European situation as well as a comprehensive understanding of conditions in the United States, he said that the difference in the attitude of the English and Americans toward Hitler is based on fear on one side and dislike on the other.

"Americans base their feeling on on abstract love of freedom," he said. "They dislike Hitler because he is opposed to all their ideas of democracy. The English people don't dislike him as much as they fear him. Fundamentally, all British worries go back to Germany.

The feeling is strong that if anyone starts trouble it will be Germany."

So intense is that fear that the sight of the Hindenburg Zeppelin flying over England has greatly alarmed the people, according to Brogan. Another thing that has contributed to the national hysteria is the government's announcement that gas masks will soon be distributed to all men, women, and children.

"When the announcement informed mothers that no masks could be made suitable for infants the women realized the very real threat of war," Brogan continued. "You over here have no idea how heavy that threat hangs over all Europe."

War Not Inevitable.

War inevitable?

"Well, no, hardly inevitable," said the Briton. "But certainly possible."

And so the people of England, he said, have stopped thinking much about politics, about taxes, about the dole, about everything except the issue of peace.

"Everyone is bound up in that one objective. Everyone is against anything that upsets the status quo because that upset may lead to war. And so England wants President Roosevelt to continue in office especially since the Senate will be Democratic for the next two years. The decision of the United States to stay out of the League of Nations is still blamed in England on the situation of having a President of one party and a Congress of another."

The English, even if they were interested, would have a difficult time trying to understand the nuances of American politics, Brogan believes.

"The Liberty League would always remain a puzzle and the most die-hard peer in the House of Lords would not know what Senator Reed has been talking about. And," he continued, "No Englishman can understand the Supreme Court. The idea of a body reviewing and passing upon the legislative branch of the Government is beyond him. He is convinced that the spirit is more important than the letter."

Brogan, himself, is extremely interested in the Presidential campaign and is reporting it for a London newspaper. Next week he will go to Kansas and then perhaps to the Dakotas to view the drought havoc.

The chief difficulty in writing about American affairs for a British publication is to explain the background.

"But that isn't as difficult here as it would be in most countries," he explained. "There are no mysteries in America. The history of the Nation is more completely documented than that of any other and there is nothing comparable to the way the United States Government publishes documents and pamphlets upon the smallest details. Europe, however, is beginning to follow that custom."

Another thing that makes news collecting and writing in this country easier than abroad is the "irreverance of Americans."

"Here few stories are off the record," Brogan said. "In England most of them are. It's the paradise of the stuffed shirt. There is no other country in which the contrast between public and private reputations is so great."

Wife of Gov. Earle To Christen Cruiser

Admiral William H. Standley, Acting Secretary of the Navy, announced yesterday that Mrs. George H. Earle, wife of the Governor of Pennsylvania, will act as sponsor at the launching in November of the U. S. S. Philadelphia, a light cruiser, now being built at the Philadelphia Navy Yard.

Of 10,000 tons displacement, the Philadelphia was authorized by Congress in 1933. Her keel was laid on May 28, 1935, and her date of completion is July 1, 1937. The cruiser will be the fifth vessel of the United States Navy to bear the name "Philadelphia."

Sparing the Rod Gives Teacher a Better Job

Wilkes-Barre, Pa., Aug. 12 (AP).—The teacher who spared the rod to the ire of his pupils' parents was given the full approval of his school board today as "this just man," and promised a better position.

Anthony Munley, 60-year-old teacher at the little one-room school in Langans Settlement, had been the center of an argument that threatened to disrupt the small community. At a stormy meeting of the settlement recently, the parents of 11 of his 16 students asked his removal because he didn't whip their children or make them do homework.

Ax Over Washington

Recent conflict between operatives of the Federal Bureau of Investigation and the United States Secret Service has brought again to public notice the legion of Government undercover units, and a new alignment of these may be proposed to Congress. Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau stands ready to indorse a grouping of Treasury investigatory activities, now separately administered by the Internal Revenue, the Federal Alcohol unit, the Narcotics Bureau and the Secret Service, into one organization.

Duplications in Federal power administration, lateral agencies purchasing land for the Government, dual consumer activities, the dozen or more agencies collecting and publishing price statistics, doubling up of scientific testing functions, supervision of America's overseas departments by three separate departments, with a similar number maintaining commercial agents abroad, all will come in for scrutiny.

Although the parallel studies are aimed at reorganization rather than policy, there is some disposition to go into agencies now working at cross-purposes, the most notorious example is the reclamation and fertilization of new land by one group, and the removal of land from production by another.

Land Policy Example Of Cross-Purposes.

In still another field, a committee of the American Bar Association recently has revealed that there are 73 administrative agencies in Washington, with judicial functions enabling them to promulgate rules that have all of the effect of laws, and, in some instances, empowering them to impose penalties. The Federal Alcohol Administration, the Patent Office and the Customs Court were among the example cited. The bar committee proposed establishment of a Federal administrative court to take over the judicial functions of these 73 units.

Another proposal that is frequently bobbing up has to do with consolidating Government transportation activities in the Commerce Department. This plan originally contemplated consolidating under the direction of an Assistant Secretary of Commerce the administrative functions of the Interstate Commerce Commission, the work of the Weather Bureau, the Bureau of Public Roads, the assorted ship services under Secretary Roper, the Bureau of Aeronautics, inland waterway work, and a number of other related agencies.

There have been frequent proposals to transfer the Bureau of Public Roads from the Agricultural Department to Interior, and the Coast Guard from the Treasury to the Navy Department.

Ickes Would Enlarge Scope of Department.

When Government reorganization last was under discussion it was proposed to abolish, reduce or consolidate much of the scientific work now being done by various Agriculture Department bureaus, including the Bureau of Animal Industry, Bureau of Dairy Industry, Forest Service, Bureau of Chemistry and Soils, Bureau of Entomology, Biological Survey, Bureau of Agricultural Engineering, Bureau of Home Economics and Bureau of Plant Quarantine and Food and Drug Administration. Since that proposal was made, early in New Deal history, many of these have expanded their work to a point never before reached.

There have been numerous unsuccessful attempts to merge the War and Navy Departments into a single "Department of National Defense," and air forces into one unit.

Secretary of Interior Ickes would like to change the name of his department and widen its scope into a "Department of Conservation and Public Works."

One of the difficult tasks of the reorganizers is to determine which of the New Deal emergency units are so wholly "temporary" that they should be weeded out at once, and which, such as the Social Security board and SEC, are so permanent in character that they must be fitted into the regular structure.

While concentrating on recent additions to the administrative structure, the Byrd committee will not overlook the co-called old line agencies. Of these, only three—the Post-office, the Department of Justice and the Department of State—have few functions not relating to their direct and major purpose. Others, such as the Treasury, the Department of Agriculture and the War and Navy Departments, have innumerable functions having no relation to a sound plan of major purpose. Some of these activities have been inherited from the time of Alexander Hamilton, when there were only four or five departments of Government. An effort may be made to strip such departments of unrelated functions and to shift and merge them into a more cohesive whole.

All of the changes attempted will not be sought in the name of economy, but rather in an effort to improve the efficiency of a sluggish, poorly co-ordinated Government machine. In those few instances where small reorganizations have been effected in the past, they have seldom been productive of substantial savings. Economy, however, is the watchword of those who are directing the attack from Capitol Hill, and wasted dollars, as well as efficiency, will claim most of the attention of investigators.

Views Vary Widely On Ultimate Outcome.

Some of those engaged in the present study have been sufficiently optimistic over the outcome to consider physical means of putting wholesale reorganization into effect, if it is successful. A "stagger" plan will be proposed, providing for different shifts on different dates, so that problematical moving day will not overtax available facilities, or interfere with the ordinary operations of Government.

There are others so pessimistic as to believe that the problem of a general Government "moving day" will never be faced until, when, and if, another Administration is inaugurated. They claim that reorganization is as old as Washington, that nothing serious is ever done, that the Government just grows.

Aware that he is up against a difficult job, "the greatest task I have ever undertaken," Senator Byrd is out to disprove the latter theory. "It may take a long time," he will tell you, "but I except to make it my life's work in the Senate." And Senator Byrd has a way of following through.

Hoover Believed Task Was One For Congress.

Not least of the obstacles he will face are the array of officials, agencies and members of Congress who have obtained vested interests in existing establishments, and will battle against any changes in the bureaus in which they are interested.

While Secretary of Commerce, Herbert Hoover recognized the full force of this opposition, which later was to frustrate his own move toward Government reorganization.

In 1924, Hoover told a special committee of Congress:

"I do not believe that any Government reorganization will ever take place that will meet with agreement among the executive heads of the Government. Cabinet heads necessarily take color from their subordinates and subordinates are, from the nature of things, bound to be in opposition to serious change. If there is to be reorganization it will have to be carried out by Congress and the President.

"The men who are at the head of various bureaus and secondary functions of the Government believe honestly and earnestly in the purpose of their service and they are bound to object to any change which seems to them would decrease their activities, reduce their personnel, or require them to take a less important position in some other grouping. They naturally and properly feel that the service which they direct is the most important function of the entire Government and that minimizing it in any direction would be wrong.

"Some of them feel so strongly that they feel it right to engage in propaganda in opposition to change. The culmination of such activities from many sources is likely to break down every attempt at reorganization as hitherto."

Vatican Assails Powers For Meddling in Spain

Vatican City, Aug. 12 (AP).—A rebuke to European powers for their failure to agree speedily to a nonintervention policy applying to the Spanish civil war was carried today by the semi-official Vatican newspaper, Osservatore Romano.

"Every day compromises the end for which initiative has been taken—that of no longer prolonging the conflict with the assistance of new forces," said the publication editorially.

It added: "Aleardy the persistent supplying of war materials to belligerents by foreign countries constitutes without doubt the fundamental cause for continuing the bloody fighting * * * what are the reasons for the slowness of diplomatic action?"

Countess de Brantes Annuls Her Marriage

Dublin, Aug. 12 (AP).—Countess Louis de Brantes, the former Lady Moira-Forbes, has obtained a French decree annulling her marriage to Count de Brantes, her father, the Earl of Granard, announced today.

Countess de Brantes, who married the Frenchman, December 20, 1934, is the granddaughter of the late Ogden Mills, and a niece of Ogden L. Mills, former secretary of the United States Treasury.

Her father, the earl, is Sir Bernard Arthur William Patrick Hastings Forbes. The couple was married at Newton Forbes, Irish Free State, at a ceremony attended by 400 guests. The countess is known as one of the wealthiest women in England.

Nazis Behead Kidnaper.

Bonn, Germany, Aug. 12 (AP).—Hans Eduard Giese, 32, was beheaded today in the first execution under Germany's new death penalty for kidnaping. Giese was convicted of kidnaping the 11-year-old son of a Bonn merchant June 14.

'Peaches' Wins Rights In Browning's Holdings

New York, Aug. 12 (AP).—The claim of Mrs. Frances Heenan Hynes, of Denver, Colo., the former "Peaches" Browning, to be legal widow of Edward W. (Daddy) Browning was upheld today in supreme court in her suit to measure her dower rights in his real estate holdings.

Mrs. Dorothy "Sunshine" Browning Hood, of North Carolina, Browning's adopted daughter, and the Title Guarantee & Trust Co., executor of his will, contended Browning's 1924 Paris divorce from his first wife, Adele Lowen Browning, had no effect.

Mrs. Hynes successfully contended that the separation suit brought against her by Browning resulted in a supreme court ruling that they were man and wife and legally separated them.

Club Here Will Ask 1937 Display Session

Plans to invite the International Association of Display Men to hold its 1937 convention in Washington will be formulated at a meeting of the newly organized National Capital Display Club August 20.

Representatives from department stores and shops compose the club. Officers are: W. Arthur Gray, Lansburgh & Brothers, president; James Stiles, Hecht Co., vice-president; Joseph McCann, S. Kann Sons' Co., treasurer, and O. D. Grimes, Palais Royal, secretary.

Queena Mario Gains Uncontested Divorce

Reno, Nev., Aug. 12 (AP).—Queena Mario, Metropolitan Opera Company soprano, of New York City, obtained a private trial, uncontested divorce decree here today from Wilfred Pelletier. She charged cruelty.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips.

The Club Throwing Olympics.

An Atlanta golf club will hold a club-throwing contest. Only the championship of Georgia will be involved, but Elmer Twitchell, claiming to be the national champion, today urged that the idea be taken up all over America. Mr. Twitchell thinks the finals, bringing together in one group the most irascible golfers in the United States, would be the most colorful spectacle of the year.

• • • •

"My title as National Club Hurling Champion of North America has never been challenged," declared Elmer, who once threw a brassie 170 yards (across water, too) and who thinks nothing of tossing an iron 150 yards any day in the week. In fact, Elmer has recently gone in for putter throwing, and last week threw his putter 147 yards against a stiff breeze, wiping out the previous record of 145¾ yards set by Mickey Wren, of the Fort Sinus Country Club.

• • • •

"However," continued Elmer, "I would welcome a series of elimination trials and be happy to meet all comers in the finals. There are millions of unknown club hurlers in this country who are potential champs, and I favor giving them their chance."

• • • •

Mr. Twitchell's mark of 170 yards was set on the Bayshore Course at Miami Beach in February, 1932, when he missed the ball completely and his opponent chirped, "Wanna have me show you how to correct that?"

• • • •

He attributes his 170-yard mark not so much to missing the ball as to his opponent's crack about correcting his form. "A remark like that will always make me throw a club at least 20 yards farther than usual," he explained. "There is only one thing that will give me greater distance, and that's somebody in the foursome saying: 'Take your stance again; I think I know what happened!"

• • • •

Mr. Twitchell favors very broad rules for the State eliminations, and makes only one specification: he would bar golfers who throw clubs before completing their swings!

• • • •

"But how about the spectators at the club-hurler Olympics?" asked a reporter. "How about the women and children?"

"In the finals we'll just have to distribute earlaps," said Elmer.

Would you say that the idea is to replace Mr. Lewis in the cast of "The Green Pastures"?

Every State is choosing its safest auto driver, and it is Elmer Twitchell's recurrent nightmare that he meets them all on a narrow road miles from a hospital, drug store or police station.

Mr. Edson A. Perkins, 77, of Torrington, is Connecticut's safest driver. He has driven an auto for 38 years and never been arrested. But he probably has had some fine chases.

As Elmer Twitchell sees it, the American Federation of Labor has declared a lockout against the two-headed boy industry.

The summer theater show of the month would seem to be that old team of Lewis & Green presenting their stupendous, gigantic, mystifying spectacle, "Sawing a Federation in Half."

Vacations Mean Little To Residents on Shore

By Jessie Ash Arndt.

Summer vacations hold little attraction for residents of the estates along the Potomac beyond Alexandria, which were once the old river farms of George Washington. Mr. and Mrs. Aldrich Dudley, Mr. and Mrs. Malcolm Matheson and their daughters, Mr. and Mrs. William D. Ord and Col. and Mrs. John Potts all are remaining on their neighboring estates near Mount Vernon for the season.

Florida, California, Europe or the Orient may find them as visitors in the winter, but in the spring and summer their own homes, with terraced gardens overlooking the water, are too lovely to leave.

One of the most noted of the old places is Wellington, the home of Mr. and Mrs. Matheson and their daughters, the Misses Peggy and Lucy Matheson. In the summer it is always gay with parties of young people who come for swimming, tennis and dancing. The swimming pool, in a secluded spot at the foot of a hill beyond the garden, is shaded by a large willow tree which is reflected in the clear blue water.

The Mathesons' daughter, Mrs. William T. Arnold, and her husband and baby daughter, who reside in Washington, spend much time at Wellington in the summer season. The historic estate will be the scene of the wedding of their youngest daughter in the fall when Miss Lucy Matheson becomes the bride of Mr. Frank Heitman. Her engagement was announced several months ago.

Col. and Mrs. Potts are here this summer for the first time in almost a year as Col. Potts has just completed a tour of duty on the Asiatic Station as marine staff officer on the flagship of the Asiatic Squadron.

Adjoins Wellington.

They are among the friends who gather informally on Sunday evenings at Ordleigh, the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ord, which adjoins Wellington. The garden at Ordleigh is one of those opened each spring in the Alexandria Garden Club tour. It is beautiful throughout the summer, but never lovelier than in June, when pink and red roses and purple clematis bloom together over the high wall from the first terrace to the second in the series leading down toward the water.

The Dudleys' home, Andalusia, is having things done to it this season—which is not unusual, for Mrs. Dudley loves changing both her house and garden. They moved to Andalusia, the old W. H. Snowden estate, about six years ago from Homewood, their estate at Middleburg, where they went as bride and bridegroom. The house there, built for them as a wedding gift by Mr. Dudley's mother, was designed after the original Homewood. This was bought by his great grandfather, Mr. Samuel Wyman, from the Carrolls of Carrollton, and has since been given by his family to Johns Hopkins University as a museum.

Mrs. Dudley spent much time in her garden in Middleburg as she is doing at Andalusia, planning the arrangement of flowers, hedges and paths entirely without the aid of landscape artists. Its beauty is widely known and visitors come from all parts of the country to see it. Dr. and Mrs. Fred Sanderson are occupying the estate this summer.

When there seemed nothing more to be done to Homewood, Mrs. Dudley looked for another place where she could carry out new ideas—and that's what she is doing now. She has had a row of 35-foot cedars moved as a background for a small evergreen garden at the foot of two terraces and a retaining wall is being built along the river bank to save two great oak trees which threaten to go into the water as the bank is washed away.

Hear Boat Music.

The house has been changed in past seasons to increase its comfort and convenience, but still retains its original structure.

The Dudleys often have dinner served on the upper terrace and entertain their friends at informal suppers and garden parties. They can hear the music from the excursion boats as they go up and down the river and, occasionally, a friend going out on the Norfolk boat persuades the captain to signal a greeting to them with his flashlight in passing.

By the river bank, out over the water, is a little boathouse which Mrs. Dudley has provided with screens and porch furniture and an old gangplank as an approach. This is another place the Dudleys and their friends enjoy on summer evenings.

Members of the younger set were entertained last fall at an oyster roast on the bank below, given by Mr. and Mrs. Dudley and their son, Mr. Aldrich Dudley, jr. The party was in honor of Miss Peggy Matheson before she left for the Finch School in New York, where she was graduated this June.

When next month comes with an "R" in its spelling, and oysters again in favor, it is most likely another roast will be arranged.

Mrs. Dudley's niece, Miss Nancy Harrison, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Harrison, of Georgetown, who made her debut last season, is one of the members of the younger group who is often at Andalusia.

Countess Writes Research Story On Shakespeare

Those who have listened to the interesting stories Countess Clara de Chambrun had to tell of her adventures and researches on the life and works of William Shakespeare will read with interest the full account of the Countess' Shakespearean sleuthing" in the Scribner's Magazine. Countess de Chambrun was the guest of her sister-in-law, Mrs. Nicholas Longworth, in Washington, in the spring and also visited Mrs. Longworth and members of the Longworth family in Cincinnati.

In her researches, she has unearthed new evidence calculated to put a quietus on the Baconian theory and give much room for discussion among students of Shakespeare.

When Countess de Chambrun was in Washington she spent much time at the Folger Library looking up "evidence" in the wealth of material which has been garnered in this Washintgon institution from all over the world. She also attended the memorial concert of chamber music held at the Library of Congress as a tribute to the musical genius of her brother, the late Nicholas Longworth.

In her findings on the authenticity of Shakespeare's writing Countess de Chambrun has discovered evidence that the poet annotated in his own handwriting an extant copy of Holinshed's Chronicles.

Countess de Chambrun has spent many years in her Shakespearean research and has written extensively on the subject. When she heard of the Holinshed notations she took a plane from Paris to Stratford to see the volume. It is in the possession of Mr. William Jaggard, who has the Shakespeare Press at Stratford-on-Avon.

Mr. Roney Gives Alumni Party

Fete One of Series Being Conducted by Group From Georgetown

Mr. Joseph Roney was host last night in his apartment at the La Salle, at one of the series of buffet suppers being given by the Georgetown Chapter of Delta Chi Fraternity. Members of the Georgetown and the Washington alumni chapters were entertained.

Special guests were Mr. Oerce Connor, of New Bedford, Conn.; Mr. Paul Essof, of Sisterville, W. Va.; Mr. George Cavanaugh, of Albany, and Mr. Edward Feeney, of New York, who are students at the summer law session of Georgetown University.

Officers of the chapter who assisted the host included Mr. Frederick Cuneo, president, and Mr. Robert Calkins, the treasurer. Some of the active members of the Alumni Chapter who were present were Mr. Calvert Bowie, Mr. William Rhea, Mr. Maurice Crane, Mr. Ralph Koebel, Maj. Norman Kane and Mr. Robert Horton, of the Ohio State Chapter.

Mr. Roney was formerly alumni adviser of the Georgetown Chapter.

Hermon Eisenburgs On Cruise to Indies

Newlyweds to Return Aug. 22, Make Home Here.

Dr. and Mrs. Herman Eisenburg, who are now on a cruise to the West Indies and South America, will return to Washington August 22 and will make their home at 1601 Argonne place.

Before their marriage Friday Mrs. Eisenburg was Miss Shirley Kolker, daughter of Mrs. Anna Kolker, of Washington. The wedding was solemnized by Rabbi Klavins and Rabbi Silverstone at the home of the bride's brother, Mr. Fred Kolker. Mrs. Eisenburg was attended by her sister, Mrs. Barney M. Robbin, as matron of honor, and her three little nieces, Misses Beverly and Barbara Joyce Kolker, and Barbara Lee Liberman. Mr. Samuel Eisenburg was best man for his brother.

Mrs. Eisenburg is an attorney. Dr. Eisenburg is a graduate of the George Washington University Medical School.

The wedding of Miss Ruth Jane Adams, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. T. Benjamin Adams, to Mr. Robert Taylor Bartley, of Dallas, Tex., took place last evening at 8 o'clock at the Hamline Methodist Episcopal Church, the Rev. H. W. Burgan officiating. Mr. Bartley is the son of Mr. and Mrs. S. E. Bartley, of Dallas.

Miss Adams was given in marriage by her father. She wore a white satin gown made on princess lines and a long veil caught to a halo cap with orange blossoms. Her bouquet was of small white orchids and lilies-of-the-valley.

Mrs. William Burnell, sister of the bride, was her matron of honor. She wore a gown of pale green chiffon made in redingote style over pale pink satin and carried a sheaf of garden flowers. Another sister of the bride, Miss Eleanor Adams, was junior bridesmaid. She was in pale pink organdy and carried an old-fashioned bouquet. The bridesmaids were Miss Betty Virginia Arth, Miss Mary Jefferson, Miss Joan Windisch and Miss Eleanor Mitchell. Their pastel gowns carried out the plan of a rainbow wedding and their bouquets were garden flowers.

Mr. Bartley had as best man Mr. Sam Rayburn. The ushers were Mr. Franklin Stafford, of Dallas; Mr. Alfred Horton, Mr. William Cantrell and Mr. William Burnell.

Following the ceremony a small reception for the immediate family and members of the wedding party was held at the home of the bride's parents. Mrs. Adams wore a gown of orchid made in the redingote style, while Mrs. Bartley, mother of the bridegroom, wore orchid chiffon.

On their return from a wedding trip to Bermuda, Mr. and Mrs. Bartley will make their home at 2310 Connecticut avenue.

Alma Nussear Wed To Charles Mehler

Bride's Sister Maid of Honor at Silver Spring.

The wedding of Miss Alma Nussear, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Nussear, of Washington, and Mr. Charles Mehler, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Mehler, took place Tuesday at noon in the Episcopal Church of the Ascension, Silver Spring, Md. The bride's cousin, the Rev. Curtis W. Draper, jr., officiated.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore an aquamarine ensemble with a corsage of gardenias and lilies of the valley.

Miss Margaret Nussear, sister of the bride, was her maid of honor and was dressed in pink, wearing a corsage of pink rosebuds and blue delphinium. Mr. Norris Reed was best man for the bridegroom and the ushers were Mr. George Mehler and Mr. William Mehler.

Mrs. Nussear wore a navy blue print and a corsage of pink roses and lilies of the valley. Mrs. Mehler, mother of the bridegroom, was dressed in navy blue net with a corsage similar to that of the bride's mother.

Mr. and Mrs. Mehler left immediately following the ceremony for a wedding trip. On their return September 1, they will make their home at Randolph Terrace.

Mrs. Mehler is the president of Eta Chapter, Beta Chi national sorority. Mr. Mehler is a graduate of Devitt Preparatory School and active in Pi Phi national fraternity.

Countess Roberti Luncheon Hostess For Italian Party

Countess Guerino Roberti yesterday entertained at luncheon at her home on Massachusetts avenue for Count and Countess Palo de Carpenetto and Countess Daisy Carpenetto, members of the Italian party which has been in Washington for the last two days.

Her other guests included Signor Giustino Bosio, who was a friend of Count Roberti, Secretary of the Italian Embassy, when both attended the university in Florence; Marquis Alberto Rossi Longhi, Counselor of Embassy, and Signor Nobile Benedetto Capomazza, Secretary of Embassy.

Count Roberti, Secretary of Embassy, was unable to be present, as he accompanied the Ambassador of Italy to New York for the luncheon he attended there yesterday. He and Count di Carpenetto attended the Italian Military College in Naples together and became friends at that time.

The Italian party, which has been staying at the Shoreham, leaves today for Chicago and goes from there to Detroit and Canada and then to New York to sail August 22 on its return to Italy.

Trainer-Stone Plans Complete

Attendants Are Selected; Miss Snell to Be Bridesmaid.

Rep. Lee Is Here With His Family For Short Visit

Representative Josh Lee, with Mrs. Lee and their two children, Mary Louise and Robert, is here from Norman, Okla., for a few days, combining business with a short vacation from campaigning.

Representative Lee, who came to Washington two years ago, has been renominated on the Democratic ticket in his district by a large majority. Mrs. Lee was in the Capital with him the first year he served in Congress, but last winter spent the season in Tucson, Ariz., with their children. He returned to Oklahoma to begin his campaign shortly before the adjournment of Congress and Mrs. Lee accompanied him to all of the meetings and political rallies he has addressed.

They first planned a motor trip to Mexico City for their vacation, but Representative Lee found it necessary to come to Washington to seek additional allotments for the drought-stricken areas of Oklahoma. He and his son came a week ago and Mrs. Lee and her daughter have just arrived by motor. They will go to New York City today, where Representative Lee expects to confer with Mr. James A. Farley and then return to the Capital.

On their way back to Oklahoma for the fall campaign, they will stop in Nashville, Tenn., where they will visit Representative Lee's mother, Mrs. Josie Lee, and sister, Miss Mary Virginia Lee, and where he will give the commencement address before the graduates of the summer session at Peabody College.

Mrs. Jeter Horton Is Hostess Today

Conductor of Water Gate Concerts a Guest.

Mrs Jeter Horton wil entertain this afternoon in honor of Mr. Fabien Sevitzky, conductor of the Watergate concerts; Mrs. Edward McCullins and her daughter, Miss Frances McCullins, and the directors of the Washington Summer Concerts Association.

The guests will include Mrs. Walter Bruce Howe, Miss Sylvia Meyer, Mrs. George Morris, Mme. Linda de Sokoloff, Miss Delphine Desio, Miss Alice Keith, Mrs. Paul Hatch and Mrs. Ida Hoyt Chamberlin.

Miss Boone in Canada.

Miss Frances C. Boone, of 1841 Columbia road, Washington, is a guest at Jasper Park Lodge, Jasper Park, Alberta, in the Canadian Rockies.

NOTES OF SOCIETY

The President leaves today for Hyde Park, where Mrs. Roosevelt has remained during his short stay in Washington. He will make two stops on way through Pennsylvania.

The Secretary of State and Mrs. Cordell Hull have gone to Hot Springs, where they are staying at the Homestead for a few days.

The retiring Ambassador of Italy, Signor Augusto Rosso, accompanied by the Secretary of the Embassy, Count Guerino Roberti, have returned from New York City, where they attended a luncheon given yesterday by the Italy-American Society in honor of the ambassador.

A farewell dinner will be given in his honor next Tuesday night by the members of the embassy staff.

Mr., Mrs. Simms Visiting in Capital.

Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Simms, of Tulsa, Okla., are at the Hamilton after a visit to Virginia Beach and Old Point Comfort. Mrs. Simms was formerly Mrs. Jessie Duke Richardson, of Memphis, Tenn.

Miss Clara Isabelle Boone has returned from New York City, where she was a guest of Miss Isabelle Scott at dinner at the National Arts Club, and spent the week-end with Mr. and Mrs. Hurley H. Boone, at their home on Bayside, Long Island.

Mr. and Mrs. Reverdy Johnson Daingerfield have returned from their honeymoon in Bermuda. They are now in Baltimore, where they will make their future home. Mrs. Daingerfield was formerly Mrs. Walter Brooks McCormick, well known in Washington and Baltimore society.

McBrides Are Hosts At Luncheon Party.

Capt. L. B. McBride, U. S. N., and Mrs. McBride, entertained at luncheon yesterday at their quarters at the United States Naval Academy in Annapolis. The guest of honor was Miss Adele Ford, of New Orleans, who has been in Washington and now is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Fairlie Dabney, at Annapolis.

Tuesday afternoon Mr. and Mrs. Dabney entertained for Miss Ford at a cocktail party. Last night Miss Ford was a guest at a dinner given by Mr. and Mrs. John Mosely Walker.

Mr. and Mrs. Reginald Bragonier, jr., who have been in Canton, China, sailed for this country from Hongkong, July 29. They will arrive about August 30 and will go to Nantucket to visit Mr. and Mrs. Reginald Bragonier, sr., at their summer home.

Maj. and Mrs. T. G. Hearne, with their son and daughter, who have been the guests of Mrs. Hearne's mother, Mrs. Edgar Jadwin, widow of Gen. Jadwin, at her home on Massachusetts avenue, are in New York, and will sail tomorrow on board the Army transport Republic for Vancouver Barracks. Maj. Hearne has been stationed at the Army War College for the last year.

Mrs. Hugh Roberts has returned from a visit to Dr. Katherine McReynolds Morrison, wife of former Representative Martin A. Morrison, and her mother, Mrs. M. B. McReynolds, at their home, Solitude, near Bluemont, Va. Mrs. McReynolds and Dr. Morrison will remain at their summer home until the middle of October when they will return to Washington.

Miss Roche to Wed On September 7.

Mr. and Mrs. Michael S. Roche announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Loraine Adelaide Roche, to Mr. Raymond M. Brown, of Youngstown, Ohio. The wedding will take place September 7 at St. Ann's Church.

Lieut. Col. and Mrs. John Brooks, of Stoneleigh Court, are leaving this week on an extended trip through the New England states and the Gaspe Peninsula. They will return by way of Murray Bay and Quebec, and will arrive in Washington early in September, when their daughter, Mrs. Desmond Southwell Fitzgerald, is arriving from London.

Mrs. Gustave Mirman has returned to Washington, after spending four months in Panama, visiting Dr. and Mrs. Murry Robinson. Mrs. Mirman, with Mr. Mirman who met her in New York, spent two weeks in Atlantic City and Wildwood.

Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Astrom have gone by motor to Saratoga Springs, New York. They will return to their Washington home in September.

Washingtonians At Bretton Woods.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward McCauley, Mrs. William Waller and Miss E. E. Waller are among the Washingtonians at Bretton Woods, N. H.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Bell Sweeney, who have been spending the summer at Bar Harbor, will go to New York in September. They will return to their home in Washington the latter part of September. Mr. and Mrs. Sweeney were among the guests at the dinner given Saturday night by Mrs. John T. Dorrance, of Philadelphia. Mrs. Dorrance was formerly Miss Ellen Mallincrodt, of Baltimore, and is well known in Washington.

Mr. Frederick Drum Hunt left Tuesday for a visit with the United States Ambassador to Italy and Mrs. Breckinridge Long at their summer home in Nantucket, Mass. From there he will go to Jamestown, R. I., to be the guest of Mr. and Mrs. William McCreery, of Ardmore, Pa. He recently returned to Washington after spending ten days with Mr. and Mrs. Gustavus F. Swift at their home in Lake Forest, Ill.

Upon his return next week Mr. Hunt, who has been living for some time at 1216 Sixteenth street northwest, will take up his residence at 4408 Western avenue, on Westmoreland Circle.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Should Employe Warn Boss That Another Employe Is Scheming to Be Boss Herself?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I work in an office where there are eight women and no men. Our boss is a woman, too. All of us like her very much, as she makes every attempt to be fair in dividing the work. The only fault any of us have to find with her is that she does not wake up to the fact that another woman in the office is doing everything in her power to be the boss herself.

• • • •

Little by little, using one underhanded means and then another, she is getting into the good graces of the higher-ups. All of us can see this except the woman who is now over us—the woman who will lose most if the schemer gets what she is working for. Now this is my problem—should I warn my boss about this, tell her exactly what I have heard and urge her to get this other employe out of the way before it is too late?

• • • •

One time I tried to drop a hint about this, but she cut me off short with something like this: "Miss ——, look after your own work and forget about the other employes." That was a month ago. Since then, all sorts of rumors have been floating around about what is going to happen. I don't want my boss to lose out, but I don't know whether I should try to warn her again or not. I don't want her to think I am carrying tales. What would you advise? G. F.

• • • •

Keep Quiet.

DEAR G. F.: Silence is never more golden than in an office—particularly one filled with women. Your boss is probably acutely aware of the situation, and if she isn't, there's not much you can do about it. It is neither your duty nor your privilege to warn her. The same advice she gave you a month ago deserves repeating now—"Miss —, look after your own work and forget about the other employes." Since you are obviously a person who pays attention to office rumors, I think you might profit by reading a book that should be on the "must" list of every woman wage earner. It is "Manners in Business" by Elizabeth Gregg MacGibbon.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I have been going steadily with a girl for 3 years. We have planned and planned to marry, but her mother will not give her consent. She says I don't make enough to support her daughter. My salary is $25 a week, and I have been promised a raise in the fall. By scrimping and saving, I have managed to buy a car and put $500 in the bank. But it has taken me five years to do this. Much of my money in the past three years has gone to flowers and candy and entertainment for the girl I love.

• • • •

She has a job and makes $15 a week. Her mother says it is not right for her to work after we marry, but I think it is all right if she (the girl) wants to do it. What do you think?

PUZZLED.

Many Wives Do.

DEAR PUZZLED: While I am heartily in favor of wives working outside the home if they wish, I do feel it is better for the husband to make enough to support the family without counting on his wife's wages. Many families in Washington live on a salary of $25 a week, but it is not easy. Since you have some money in the bank and your fiancee has a job, chances are you could manage to get along. Much will depend, of course, on whether your wife is economical. If she has been working long at $15 a week, she has probably learned the value of money and will be as interested as you are in making a dollar go as far as possible. Whether your marriage would be a success would depend largely on this. If you are sure you love the girl and she loves you, and if your financial future is all that disturbs the girl's mother in your regard, I think you might as well go ahead and marry.

Today's HEALTH TALK

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

Glands That Govern.

Yes! Our glands (endocrines) are teeming with mystery. They have puzzled the scientists of the world for centuries, and while we now have a speaking acquaintance with most of them they continue to harbor many secrets.

They are called ductless glands because no tubes carry their secretions into the digestive tract or elsewhere in the body. What they produce is absorbed by the blood and in dilute form reaches every cell. They are busy day and night, and without them we wouldn't be ourselves, nor could we carry on with efficiency.

Most of us have had first-hand experience with some one of these structures. Some member of the family may have had a goiter, which is merely an enlargement of the thyroid, the gland which lies on either side of the neck with a connecting isthmus between. We may have seen the nervousness this gland can cause if it secretes too freely; and how dull, stupid and uninteresting will be the individual whose thyroid produces too little.

There is a very close relation between the thyroid and one of the chemical elements known as iodine. Whenever there is not enough iodine in our food or in the water we drink the thyroid tends to enlarge. We may have observed the swelling of the glands that occurs commonly in girls about the age of puberty and sometimes in woman during pregnancy, because more of its output is demanded by the body at such periods. In many districts it is a common practice to add very tiny amounts of iodine to the food of growing children, although in certain localities this not required.

One of the strangest of these ductless glands is known as the pituitary. This consists of two lobes, each with a different function. The anterior portion exerts the power of a boss over numerous body reactions. It is the master gland, governing growth as well as the activities of the sex glands. When its secretions are inadequate the patient will become stunted. If it produces too much, either a giant results or there is marked distortion of certain features of the body.

New Flour Helps In Biscuit Making

Ithaca, N. Y. (U.P.)—"Very tender" biscuits from a new type wheat flour is claimed by the Cornell University agricultural experiment station.

The new wheat, known as No. 19, was sent to a milling concern and then tried in homes and bakeries.

Girls in the research laboratory who tried the flour reported that it "yielded products which were more tender than those of the flour with which we were comparing it."

Shoppers Urged To Treat Clerks With Courtesy

By Margaret Wallace.

COURTESY and consideration toward employes of the shops mark the well-bred shopper. In Washington's shopping district, one rubs shoulders with many celebrities. During shopping hours the stores are the rendezvous for people who are important socially in the National Capital.

Shoppers in Washington will find a high average of courtesy given. The first rule of a good shopper is to remember that no matter how important or unimportant she is in the social or political life of the city, the routine of the shop is planned not for any individual but for the convenience of many.

The well-bred shopper will not attempt to usurp the privileges of the shopper who already has engaged the attention of a clerk. She will not complain to a busy clerk, who after all can only wait on a certain number of people at a time. Nothing marks lack of breeding in a shopper as much as loud complaints about the clerks.

Query—My neighbor boasts that she always gets waited on at once when she shops. I met her in a shop recently and would not have recognized the gracious lady I had always considered her to be. She pushed in front of the other shoppers with "wait on me, please, I am in a great hurry." The clerk was very polite and said, "I will just as soon as I can. I have a customer now." But my neighbor was nothing daunted and edged herself in front of the other women, complained again and again until the harassed clerk did turn to her from a customer who had prior claim. My neighbor got waited on before the rest of us, but several people standing around knew her. I, for one, do not think as much of her. Do you think my judgment is harsh and that her boast that she gets service when she starts out is anything to be proud of?

Answer—No. She has usurped the privileges of others, made herself conspicuous and embarrassed the clerk. She also lost her reputation of being well-bred with her neighbors.

Query—I went shopping with a man friend of mine for some books and handkerchiefs for my sister, who is going to college. He insisted on paying for them although he has never met my sister. I was embarrassed, of course, but could not make a scene before the clerks. I only asked him to go with me because he has a sister in college and thought he could help me in the selection of the books.

I told him how much money I wanted to spend for the books and said we would have to keep within that limit. He insisted on adding more than I could afford. We are fellow employes in the Government and receive about the same salary and have about the same responsibilities. He cannot afford to buy books for my sister. When we went to the handkerchief counter he was lavish in his selection—and even insisted on buying a book for me. I would like to return him the money. Do you think I should do so?

Answer—Yes. Send him a check or the money, explaining that you cannot allow him to pay for your sister's presents from you. It would be proper for you to keep the book he purchased for you and to thank him cordially for it. It would have been good form for him to have purchased a book or two for your sister to include in the ones you paid for.

Query—What can one do when a clerk in a store is rude? One recently told me that I should know what I wanted before I came shopping. I was shopping for material for a lace dress and could not decide on the color until I saw what colors they had. I did not make any answer but made my selection and told her how many yards I wanted. She said "thank you" and I said "You are welcome." My sister said I was too mild and should have scolded the girl for the sake of other customers. I felt that my silence was a rebuke and that my dignified manner was as good as scolding and much better bred.

Answer—You were right.

Things That Make Women More Beautiful

By Mignon.

(The Mignon who writes this column does not sell, indorse or manufacture any cosmetics.

I THINK one of the finest tricks that any perfumer ever discovered was that of making a skin sachet. For women who want to be attractive—and find me one who doesn't—there is nothing more desirable than a skin sachet.

A woman whose products have been found not wanting has brought out a skin sachet about which I do not hesitate to rave. It doesn't assault your nostrils; most decidedly it lures you on. It has spice in its fragrance and it is very moderate in price.

Used a little more sparingly than bath power or talcum, after the bath, it leaves you feeling very much as I suppose a pink tea rose would feel beside a mountain daisy. It is one thing to be pretty, but it is a better thing to be pretty and delicately fragrant at the same time.

You couldn't possibly waste your money buying a bottle of this new skin sachet and I insist that a delicate scent for some unknown reason increases one's self-respect.

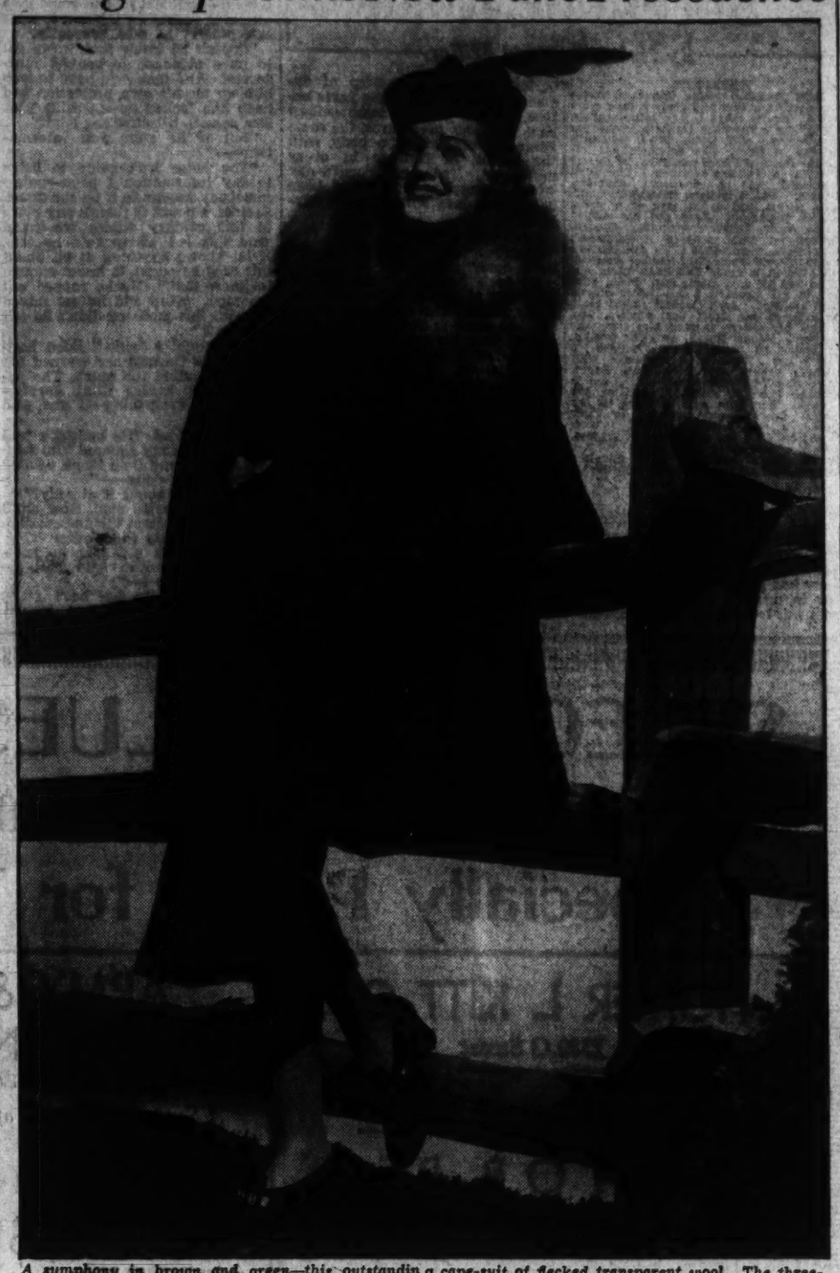
Swing Cape Suits Now Take Precedence



A symphony in brown and green—this outstanding cape-suit of flecked transparent wool. The three-pieces are dark green with flecked pattern in tones of the brown—the red fox collar belongs to the jacket of the suit. Without benefit of blouse, the suit becomes a smart street frock; the cape may be worn with numerous crepe or woolen tailored costumes. Gloves, bag and hat are brown and the paddock step-in shoes are green buckskin with brown calf trimming.

Influence Has Pervaded Every Phase of Styling.

By Ethel Ehlen.
The Post Fashion Editor.

THE SUIT with a swing cape has taken precedence over the swagger-topped suit. This swing influence has definitely pervaded the entire mode and attached itself to every phase of styling. Previewing the fall and winter fashions in the New York markets during the past several weeks, I noted that every showing included not just a few, but numerous capes. They seem to have that certain elusive air of best interpreting the trend of the times. Short and long capes; those of finger tip and seven-eighth length; capes made of the same material as the frock or suit, and capes of contrasting color and fabric, are all going to town and making an important impression.

When buying a suit this season it is well to remember that three pieces are not only smarter than two, but have greater possibilities for versatility. The short-jacketed suit of sheer wool, worn with a blouse, sweater, or one of the popular sports shirts, is ideal for wear all day when the weather gets cool. Grand for shopping, and incomparable for the business girl. When the days get still cooler, don the cape and you have added chic as well as sufficient warmth. Such a suit-cape can also be worn over simple, tailored frocks of either crepe or wool in lieu of a fall coat; a choice which marks your ensemble definitely 1937.

This scrambling of clothes, materials and colors is one of the most interesting pastimes for the ingenious woman of fashion, and it never was as fascinating as it can be this fall; with designers catering to the cause. Two and three-color themes in all of the high-fashion tones of fall lend themselves beautifully to unique color pictures. Accessories for flecked woolens usually take their cue from the materials and repeat the colors incorporated in the weaving. Thus making for a more conservative ensemble and in the case of the dressier type of suit, definitely taking it out of the class of sports type.

While line is vastly important, styling, although simple in effect, really is complicated in execution—all kinds of tricks are employed for various illusions. For instance, a two-piece suit with a top cape trimmed with a huge fur collar; from appearances the fur is attached to the cape, while in reality it belongs to the jacket of the suit. Or, a suit with a tunic jacket whose top is fashioned of fur apparently—it is really a snug little fur coat which is removable and may be worn with other costumes. This is a season when the majority of clothes are not what they seem to be—much more intricate than the general simple lines would have you believe at a cursory glance.

Your Fall Suit

Must be three-piece
Of transparent Wool
Topped with a cape
Either black, brown, green or gray
Trimmed with fur
Of slim lines with "Swing"
Highlighted with Color-Contrast.

Three-Piece Outfits Offer Possibilities for Versatility.

The new transparent woolens of course are largely responsible for this bag of tricks and consequent complication of style. They are soft, flexible, easily manipulated and sheer enough in weave to adapt themselves to form-fitting styling, even when several layers of the fabric is employed for "suits within suits." The jackets of many of the three-piece suits are buttoned all the way down the front in a modified basque fashion; making the two-piece part of the ensemble a dress rather than a suit, without benefit of blouse. As can be readily seen, such a purchase is wise and economical and a three-piece suit could serve so many purposes and occasions, it would need little else to carry the person on a stringent budget through the entire season.

Shoes to accompany this type of outfit are as versatile and complicated as the costumes. In monotone color themes or in several tones to repeat the colors of the woolens. All of the dressmaker touches of the mode have been transferred to shoes; stitching, buttons, buckles and straps simulating belts. The high-neck trend so ubiquitous this fall has produced shoes, either spectator sports or more formal affairs, which are also high-throated. Completing the ensemble with a hat that is either high in the front or has the illusion of height, none of the present popular trends of modern styling have been omitted. And, the general picture is smartness personified.

Charm With Good Talk

FLOCKS of pretty girls at the summer resort, but Hugh singled out Lucile! Why? Because of her skill and charm in talk.

When the young people chatted of their friends and their good times, he felt like an outsider. Lucile talked on general topics, made him feel one of the crowd.

"Have you discovered the merry-go-round over across the river?" she asked him. "We've all been going over there and getting back to childhood days!"

Her voice was low, pleasant, well pitched, the result of cultivation. It's a charm that any girl can acquire.

Hugh noticed that Lucile could talk to all kinds of people. Discuss hooked rugs with prim Miss Halleck, making toy airplanes with 12-year-old Jack, the appeal of swing music with the drummer of the band, and books or the new model cars with Hugh himself.

So that's why he's been Lucile's shadow lately. It's no vacation fancy with him!

Good talk—entertaining, considerate—is bound to rate you high. Cheap talk—full of slang, wisecracks, stepping on prejudices or tastes—makes you an outsider.

Our 40-page booklet, Improving Your Conversation, tells you what to listen for in your own talk. Poor English, bad voice, wrong topics, lack of tact. Check up on yourself. Make your talk an asset, not an enemy.

Send 15 cents for our booklet, Improving Your Conversation, to The Washington Post Home Institute, 109 West Nineteenth street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address and the name of booklet.

Colorful Pajamas For Dinner Wear

New York, Aug. 12 (AP).—Pajamas may be worn to dinner this fall, and just to show how slinky they can be, one designer created a pair made of black sequins.

A full-length transparent cape barred in silver and trimmed with bands of scarlet sequins goes with this outfit, guaranteed to make your dinner party "different."

Dinner pajamas also are being shown in all shades of velvet and satin; and it's chic to combine colors—for example, pale blue satin jacket and slacks, and satin blouse of eggplant color.

Woman's Grand Fall Finery May Mean Return to Parlor; If So, Who Pays the Bills?

By Malvina Lindsay.

Fall fashion news from Paris and New York might so indicate. Despite revolutions on every hand, women seem to be going Rightist in a big way as far as clothes are concerned.

• • • •

Dispatches abound in references to gold and silver brocades, velvets, satins, embroideries, silver lame, gold cloth evening gowns, mink and ermine coats, feathered hats and other accoutrements of feminine Tories. Bosoms are in again—so are fur muffs, pearl dog collars and bird of paradise head dresses. Dowagers are expected to be rampant on the scene—in fact one New York firm is openly advertising clothes for the "important woman."

Women's styles have always been good barometers of the times, according to social historians. And elaborate and voluminous clothing has always been accompanied by religion, romance, conservation and feminine retreat, points out Dr. C. Willett Cunnington in his recent book, "Feminine Attitudes in the Nineteenth Century."

• • • •

To Sit on a Sofa.

IN VIEW of this, Leftists and feminists may well ponder what the coming era of dressiness may presage. However, the average woman will consider it a break in her favor. For awhile it looked as if she were going to be relegated to the kitchen. Now it seems, if the coutouriers are to be believed, she is merely to return to the drawing room—sit on a sofa in her gold brocaded gown and do parlor tricks.

• • • •

It will be interesting to see if Dr. Cunnington's theory of the relation of clothes and feminine retreat holds good. All the cards seem stacked against it. For one thing, where are the drawing rooms to which women may retire? For another, how can you keep a gal down in the parlor after she's seen the market place—to say nothing of the golf links and the night clubs?

• • • •

Increasing economic pressure, political revolutions, military preparation, the imminence of war, the rumblings of a new social order—all these would seem to form an insurmountable barrier against woman's return to the drawing room—or for that matter, even the kitchen. In fact, it seems almost unbelievable that in the face of a threatening world chaos, she should be donning her ostrich feathers.

What Price Victorians?

LET US hope she is not doing a Marie Antoinette not having a last fling before the guillotine falls. Let us hope that the social historian's theories of clothes hold true—that the return of fancy apparel does really mean that things are going to be settled and prosperous and romantic again and that all of us are going to have the chance for a good rest on some gilt-legged drawing room sofa.

• • • •

If that happens the joke will be on the men. They have recently been expressing a nostalgia for the charming Victorian who didn't mess up their business of running the world. They have wanted delightful dinner companions who would toy with fans, listen with reverence and not impinge on their egos. A little fed up with the modern woman, they have said grandiloquently that woman's place was in the drawing room.

• • • •

Of course when a man says "drawing room" he really means "kitchen." But now since women have taken him at his word and are arraying themselves in the finery of ladies the next step is up to him to provide the drawing rooms—the plush divans, the satin cushions and the push buttons. Certainly a woman cannot broil a steak in an ermine trimmed negligee. Certainly she cannot go out and help raise money to pay the rent attired in Lyons velvet or gold brocade.

Pleasant HOMES

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

"I'VE GOTTEN off, at last, on the right track with my children," a middle-aged woman remarked at a tea party the other day. "I decided to accept the fact that they wouldn't be interested in me much any more . . . they're out of college now and working, although all four of them still live at home. They think they are pretty smart, of course, so I thought I might as well retire gracefully before they gently but firmly gave me a push.

"Oh, I even went them one better. I had my bedroom all done over in silver and rose quartz with a touch of mauve, complete with modern furniture in a lovely grey wood . . . I never can think of the name of it. Anyway . . . this took the place of the dog-eared old room I'd always had, where everybody in the family parked and appropriated for anything from paper dolls to pillow fights. I thought I'd beat them to a declaration of independence and show them that I had my own life to live too. I joined a bridge club, enrolled in a swimming class and volunteered for some charity hospital work that took part of every day.

"And now the children are all up in arms. They miss the old room as a hang-out and they feel very much neglected because I'm always dated up." She chuckled. "But I'm going to keep right on with living my own life . . . if for no other reason than to keep so popular with the children.

"I don't hang around their company and let them wish I'd shut up talking about things the younger generation isn't interested in. Instead, I keep my calendar so full that they have to invite me quite far in advance to be sure I can appear at their parties and meet their friends. Oh, they really make quite a point of getting me now."

Kettering Tells Trust Hearing Of Huge Losses

By the Associated Press.

Charles F. Kettering, the famous inventor and General Motors vice president, told the Securities Commission yesterday that he put $260,000 into an investment trust in 1930, became a director without knowing it, and wound up with a $240,000 loss.

Wearing a conservative brown business suit and blue tie, the technician was on the stand less than an hour in the commission investigation of investment trusts.

He testified that he acquired 40,000 shares of stock in Yosemite Holding Corporation of Detroit in 1930 because he looked upon the deal as an opportunity to procure a participation in diversified security holdings.

"Not Very Profitable."

He said he regarded investment trusts as "rather like insurance companies."

"You didn't know," asked David Schenker, commission counsel, "that they were not subject to regulations like insurance companies?"

"No, I didn't know that," said Kettering.

"Do you think they should be subject to such regulations?"

"Well, you see, I am so far removed from that sort of thing I really wouldn't know."

He testified he did not know about various Yosemite activities outlined by Schenker, and the attorney remarked that "all you know is that you came in with $260,000 and went out with $20,000."

"It wasn't very profitable," Kettering said with a grin.

Says Groves Was Gainer.

He testified he liquidated his Yosemite investment when he sold 20,000 shares of stock in Equity Corporation of New York for $1 a share. This stock had been given him in exchange for his 40,000 shares of Yosemite when control of Yosemite was taken over by the New York Investment Trust in 1932.

Schenker asserted that Wallace Groves, Baltimore and New York financier who controlled Yosemite, received three shares of Equity for each share of his Yosemite holdings when the exchange deal was made, while Kettering received only ⅓ share of Equity for each of his Yosemite shares.

Kettering said he did not know this.

Questioned as to how he happened to become a Yosemite director, Kettering said he did not know how it happened, although he had "tried to find out."

Schenker asserted Kettering had been listed as a director on Yosemite stock promotional literature and that this "made very effective sales material."

Belgians Refuse to Load Arms for Revolutionists

Antwerp, Belgium, Aug. 12 (AP).—A rebel agent for Spanish Fascists, it was reported here today, had purchased 2,500 pistols, 650 machine guns and 50,000,000 cartridges but was unable to move them from the Antwerp docks because of this government's neutrality stand.

Stevedores refused to load a Dutch steamer cargo of 49 railway cars containing arms, partly of Belgian and partly of German manufacture, which the workers said were consigned to Spain.

Exporters asserted the arms were intended for Brazil, but the stevedores Socialist trade union declared they were intended for the Spanish civil war conflict and ordered workers not to load them aboard the steamer.

Ship Leaves Singapore; Held Up 3 Days in Strike

Singapore, Aug. 12 (AP).—The Dollar Liner President Hayes, with hundreds of tourists aboard, sailed this afternoon after being held in the harbor for almost three days by striking crew members.

Twenty-six of the strikers who refused to leave the city where they had gone in search of food were rounded up by police and given the alternative of being booked on vagrancy charges or rejoining the ship. They chose the latter.

The strike began after an oiler had been demoted to fireman. The captain refused to furnish meals to those who joined the walkout.

Contractor Dies

OSCAR D. ALLEN.

Oscar Allen Dies While Swimming

Oscar D. Allen, 50, of 6233 Thirtieth street northwest, a contractor, died of a heart attack yesterday while swimming in the ocean at Seaside Heights, N. J., where he was spending his vacation. His daughter, Dorothy, 24, also of Washington, was swimming with him, the Associated Press said.

Mr. Allen has been a resident of Washington since 1914. He was a member of the Masons, Chevy Chase Lodge, and of the Chevy Chase Presbyterian Church. He has been a contractor for the May Hardware Co., 1818 New York avenue northeast, since the close of the World War. During the war he served in the War Ordinance Department.

He is survived by his widow, a son, Laurence Allen, and a daughter, Dorothy Allen, all of Washington.

U. S. Accepts Bid To Peace Parley

By the Associated Press.

Secretary Hull yesterday announced this Government's formal acceptance of Argentina's invitation to the inter-American peace conference at Buenos Aires on December 1.

The announcement was made in the publication of an exchange of cablegrams between the Secretary of State and the Minister for Foreign Affairs of Argentina in which Hull said the date set by Argentina for the conference was acceptable to the United States.

The peace parley was suggested first by President Roosevelt several months ago.

Army in Philippines May Raise Own Food

Manila, P. I., Aug. 12 (AP).—Maj. Gen. Paulino Santos, chief of staff of the new Philippine army, plans to make the army grow its own food. The general says "I hate to invest 1 cent of the government's money in this program of national defense if this country cannot feed its soldiers during time of war."

Gen. Santos' program is said to have the approval of President Manuel L. Quezon and Maj. Gen. Douglas MacArthur, former United States Army chief of staff, who is setting up defense plans.

Gen. Santos plans to grow foodstuffs in every training camp, as soon as the camps are opened, January 1, for the training of the first batch of 20,000 conscript soldiers. There will be 128 camps scattered throughout the islands, each camp with a land area of from 25 to 200 acres.

Husband Is Indicted In Wife's Torch Death

St. Petersburg, Fla., Aug. 12 (AP). Tearfully pleading innocent, John Spanglehour, 48-year-old self-styled herb doctor, heard a first-degree murder indictment read today charging him with the torch death of his wife at their auto-trailer home near here.

"I didn't do it I tell you, I didn't do it." Spanglehour cried while a constable read the charges ordered by a coroner's jury which investigated the death of the 48-year-old mother of five children.

Mrs. Spangler died in flames Monday on an outdoor bed at their trailer home in an isolated woods south of Petersburg.

SYNOPSIS.

Eden Faraday, young secretary, opens the door of a taxi and finds a man murdered. She is taken to the police station, where she meets Jack Garnett, newspaper cameraman, and Owen Field, assistant district attorney, who arranges her release. Eden had been mistaken for Gracie Lincoln, a gunman's widow. The man murdered was a notorious gangster, Grappi. Eden's mother, Bridget Faraday, sells gowns and is in love with suave Sidney Creighton. Eden and her spoiled young sister, Robin, and brother, Coburn, depend on their peppery grandmother. Because of rumor that Eden can identify the murderers Owen Field has her guarded. An attempt is made to kidnap Eden, but Field and his men rescue her. Field takes her to his mother's home, where she is kept secluded. Jack Garnett climbs roofs to talk to her from her window, and enlists her aid in helping him solve the mystery. Raquel Rusak, an older woman, is trying to force Coburn Faraday to marry her. While at a roadhouse with Raquel, Coburn sees his sister, Robin, come in with Sidney Creighton. Eden is brought home by Owen Field after the inquest. She goes with Garnett to see Gracie Lincoln, now married to Clint Jarvis, a taxi driver. Clint has been forced to drive the murderers of Grappi. Eden's grandmother is a friend of Mat Burke, district attorney. Eden promises to help Clint gain an audience with Burke.

CHAPTER XIV.

Innocent Victims.

Eden felt quickly at ease under Mat Burke's eyes. She did not know that nothing so pleasing to view had graced that official chamber in many a year—that the old man was looking at her and remembering another Irish wisp of audacity he had known long years before. There was the same gallant chin, the same grave eyes, the same tender mouth and slim body with the spring of courage in every movement. There had been a day when young Mat Burke had been halfway in love with Georgia Dryman.

Eden rose quickly.

"You're very good to let me come here," she said.

He took her hand, and did not go back to the pontifical looking chair behind the desk, but pulled another close to her own and took a pipe from his coat pocket.

"I listen better when I smoke," he explained. "Your grandmother said you had something to tell me. Did you hold out on the coroner's jury?"

Eden shook her head. "I told them everything that I knew. I told them about finding Grappi dead in that taxicab, and that was true. I told them I knew nothing at all about it, and that was true, too. But last night I heard something from a man who doesn't dare come to you himself——"

She told him the story then, not mentioning names, justifying young Clint Jarvis without revealing his identity, and Burke sat inscrutable, moving his long fingers round and round the bowl of his pipe.

"So—this chap knows who killed Grappi—and he'd like to trade us a couple of names for a ticket to some safe place?" he said, presently.

"Doesn't he know that we've got to have evidence to convict murderers? And that we'd have to lock him up for his own protection and keep him locked up—in solitary as like as not—till after the trial?"

"But if he gave you information——"

"The judge isn't going to listen to any information I have—unless somebody swears to it on the stand. Besides, I doubt if there's any place in this country where we could send this lad where he'd be safe. If he knows anything at all about this case he ought to know enough to know that." Burke rapped out the pipe. "How did he get mixed up with this mob—or didn't he tell you that?"

"He bought a taxi—" Eden hesitated. Jack Garnett had warned her about revealing too much. The police would harass Clint Jarvis—jeopardize everything—if she said too much.

Burke nodded. "He bought a taxi—and then Monk squared him with that racket—and then Monk wanted a little favor done——"

"You know about it already?"

"I know Monk's mob. How am I supposed to contact this information in case I decide to go after it?"

"You mustn't put him in jail—you must agree to help him get away. His wife——"

"He has a wife, has he?"

"Yes—and she has had trouble enough. She has a bad cough——"

"You say this young feller, Garnett, is befriending this taxi driver?"

"Yes—but I'm to carry a message. Whatever you want me to say——"

Martin Burke leaned his elbows on his knees and wrinkled his long mouth quizzically.

"You wouldn't be talking about Gracie, would you? Gracie Lincoln—and that young punk she married?"

Before she had control, Eden knew that her eyes had betrayed her. "Oh," she cried, "it isn't fair! You mustn't persecute them because of me! They trusted me. She had nothing to do with it—she is sick and pitiful——"

"Stir up any bloody mess in this town," Burke mused, looking absently at the rug, "and at the bottom of it you'll find Gracie! So Clint Jarvis sent you here. You're a kind-hearted girl, Eden Faraday. That's the Irish in you. Your grandmother was a kind-hearted woman, too—always keepin' up some worthless little soubrette or stage hand down on his luck! She made a fortune and didn't save a cent! Then she married Bob Faraday because he was a lonely man with a soulful bass voice, singin' in the choir on Sundays."

"But—you must see—this was a confidence! They'll think I tricked them—they're both innocent victims——"

"Clint knows that if he breaks this case they'll get him," Burke argued. "They'd have to get him. They're on the run in this town—but they've got to keep their stragglers scared plenty—keep discipline inside the mob. We've broken the back of the beast, but," his voice took on a slow weariness, "its tail won't die till the sun goes down, I'm thinking."

"But you'll talk to him? Please—you'll try to do something——"

"If Clint came through for us we'd try to come through for him—but you can see that there's practically nothing we can do but put him in a safe place—if there is a safe place for Clint. You get word to him that I'll have one of the boys pick him up early tomorrow morning. Tell him to cruise his taxi here about 7."

"Thank you. Gran said you were a grand person."

"Did she?" he grinned. "That wasn't what I heard."

"And—you won't tell any one? If they—those people thought that I knew—that I was talking——"

"Dear child, I know that mob better than you do. I'll take care of you. Now," he pressed a button on his desk, "I'll send you home."

The door opened and Owen Field came in, with a promptness that indicated that he had been waiting. "Take this witness home," Burke ordered, with a grin. "I can't get anything out of her—maybe you can."

"But—I'm not going home," Eden argued. "I have to go back to work."

"It's after eleven—you can take time out for lunch, surely," Field argued.

"Mr. McLachlan——"

"We'll phone Mr. McLachlan that your're detained at this office. And in the meantime," Field was gallant, "how about a filet with mushroom sauce? I know a place only a jump away."

"It sounds enticing," Eden admitted. "Good-by, Mr. Burke—and thank you!"

"Good-by, young lady."

The restaurant was narrow, interestingly dim, with autographed photographs hung along the dark wood walls. Field ordered swiftly without glancing at the menu. Eden relaxed. She always enjoyed watching him in action, his smooth assurance, his assumption that the world had been created to serve him. If only there had not been that little touch of the dire about him, pomp and doom and the implacability of the law, all gilded over with charm.

The woman who could fall in love with him would be forever cherished, admired, adored—but she would never be quite free. Never a person any more, rather a possession. She would have luxury and security—but she would have Sara Field for a mother-in-law and a little of Sara, dominating and slightly cold, in Sara's son.

Eden considered these things soberly, for her intuition told her that this tall, blond person was falling in love with her. It was in his voice, in the votive way he served her food.

Firm to Give Union Labor 2-Week Trial

Will Sign Contract When Production Costs Are Reduced.

William M. Edwards, president of Dutch Baker Boy, Inc., last night announced his acceptance of an offer to settled the plant's labor troubles by putting in union bakers on a two-week trial basis.

The unusual offer was made by Charles B. McClosky, business agent of Bakers Union No. 18, after previous negotiations to end a strike of wagon drivers, which began last Thursday, had ended in failure.

As explained by Edwards, the oral agreement, proposed by McClosky and accepted by him, makes the following provisions:

McClosky becomes production manager pro tem of the bakery, located at 807 Monroe street northeast, with full power to replace as many bakers as he desires. The men who are "furloughed," however, will continue to draw their pay. The union workers who take their places will receive the regular union wage scale.

According to Edwards, McClosky purposes to prove that, with organized bakers at the ovens, the increased efficiency will be great enough to cut production costs by 50 per cent. Whereas the bakers' present pay roll is 10 per cent of the retail value of the goods they turn out, the ratio will be slashed in half before the two-week trial period is over, Edwards said he was promised by McClosky.

"If the experiment is successful, I'll be only too glad to sign a union contract," said Edwards. Heretofore he has refused to make such an agreement because, he claimed, it would result in bankruptcy.

During the trial period, the bakery's trucks will be manned by the same men as at present, Edwards declared. The majority of them were hired to take the places of drivers who struck last week for shorter hours and a $38 weekly wage minimum.

The head of Dutch Baker Boy added, however, that if McClosky proves a union shop is more economical and a contract is signed, drivers as well as bakers will be taken from union lists.

City Asks U. S. Aid Against Vice Ring

Local police yesterday asked the Department of Justice to co-operate in rounding up a white slave ring operating in the South from headquarters here in a downtown hotel.

Two men and a woman were arrested in the hotel early yesterday by Detective Sergents. Frank O. Brass and Paul E. Ambrose.

Inspector Bernard W. Thompson said the Justice Department was asked to aid in the arrest of several more members of the ring who are believed to be in a Southern city enticing young girls here.

Thompson said the investigation is not complete but apparently the ring has been operating on a large scale and the arrest of the three probably will lead to the capture of others and the breaking of a syndicate.

Girl, 13, Missing From Home Here

Police started search yesterday for 13-year-old Esther Kishter, who has been missing from her home, 618 Keefer place northwest, since Saturday.

The girl was reported missing by her mother, Mrs. Helen Kishter, who told police her daughter had been visiting a friend and after leaving there had not been seen since.

At the time of her disappearance Esther was wearing a white skirt, red sweater and white shoes. She weighs 90 pounds, is 5 feet 1 inch tall, has brown eyes and brown curly hair.

Map Marks Opening Of U. S.-Mexico Road

The American Automobile Association has issued its first highway map of North America, commemorating the formal opening of the highway from the United States to Mexico City.

Three thousand seven hundred miles of road stretching from the western and eastern areas of Canada, through the United States, and southward to Mexico City are depicted on the map.

Riot Call

Woman, Boy Friend Fight; Sirens Draw Crowd.

Lusty screams from a colored woman, who was having a difference of opinion with her boy friend caused a near riot at Thirteenth and T streets northwest, last night.

Attracted by the woman's yelling a passer-by turned in a riot call to police. All available radio cars in the area, sirens screaming, descended on the corner.

When five police cars and countless motorcycle policemen arrived the battlers had gone; instead they found 2,000 curious persons milling around, blocking traffic for blocks. Several arguments that nearly resulted in blows ensued as police unsnarled the situation.

Brown Selects Trio to Survey Court Building

Crawford, Capt. Milliken, Edwards Will Study Housing Adequacy.

A committee of three Police Department officials has been chosen by Police Chief Ernest W. Brown to make a survey of the present Police Court Building to determine its adequacy to house Police Headquarters, the House of Detention, and Woman's Bureau.

The three, Chief Clerk Howard E. Crawford, Capt. Rhoda Milliken, head of the Woman's Bureau, and Inspector Lewis I. H. Edwards, director of personnel for the department, will begin the investigation next week.

Maj. Brown said he chose the committee following authorization by the District Commissioners, who are in sympathy with the move for a new headquarters building and several new precinct stations.

The Police Court Building will be left vacant next year after completion of the new building planned for Judiciary Square. Plans for a new headquarters building were drawn up and approved more than six years ago but it has been impossible to get an appropriation.

On the advice of the Commissioners Maj. Brown instructed the committee to investigate Police Court as to adequacy of space and the suitability of the building to house administrative headquarters and the Detective Bureau.

Maj. Brown said yesterday the present Police headquarters building was condemned by District engineers several years ago and is outmoded and inadequate to house the Police Department.

In his annual report to the Commissioners Maj. Brown recommended a program for construction of new precinct station buildings and establishment of a new precinct to carry part of the burden of the Second Precinct's duties. Ninety per cent of the colored population lives in that precinct.

Ex-Envoy to U. S. From Egypt Dies

Word was received here yesterday of the death in Port Said of Ibrahim Ratib Bey, former Egyptian Minister to the United States. Ratib died July 26 after a brief illness, his friends learned.

At his bedside when the end came were his wife, Mme. Ratib, and their daughter, Nihal Menemenli.

Ratib was Minister in Washington in 1934 and 1935. Only last week another former Egyptian Minister, Samy Pasha, died in Alexandria, Egypt.

The Ratibs entertained with distinction when they occupied the embassy here. Surviving Ratib are his widow, his daughter and two sons. Funeral services were held in Cairo last week.

Finicky Frog At Aquarium Fed by Spoon

Orsinger Is Arm-Weary From Meal Whims of Popeye.

Popeye the Bullfrog, who came from Louisiana without a banjo crost his knee, but with a tremendous appetite is going soft because he insists upon being fed from a spoon.

"That critter's got me arm-weary already," Fred J. Orsinger, director of the Commerce Department aquarium and therefore Popeye's keeper, moaned yesterday. "He's too lazy to catch his food on the fly like regular frogs do. I have to give him his hamburger with a spoon."

The inference is not, of course, that hamburgers fly. What Orsinger meant was that frogs ordinarily fatten up on flies and other live insects that come their way. They won't touch dead ones, and Popeye, apparently, won't touch them, dead or alive, so Orsinger has to use the hamburger and spoon method.

The aquarium director happened to mention to Dr. Paul Bartsch, mollusk expert of the Smithsonian Institution, that Popeye was a temperamental tenant who had to be handfed. Dr. Bartsch laughed and did not attempt to hide his incredulity.

"All right, I'll show you," said Orsinger.

Flaunting a spoonful of fresh chopped meat a couple of inches from the Louisianan's clammy muzzle, Orsinger almost lost a finger. Thats how quick Popeye goes for floating hamburger.

All you have to do to get a three-pound specimen to snap at a loaded spoon is wave it in front of him. Frogs must get action from their prospective meals, whether it is a fly or a piece of silverware (with cargo aboard) propelled artificially.

"Playing nurse to that rock squatter," said Orsinger, "is trouble enough but I think I can stand it unless he gets a notion he must have a daily rubdown or a manicure."

Italian Travelers Visit Roosevelt

Officials of the Order of Sons of Italy yesterday visited President Roosevelt at the White House yesterday prior to sailing next week for a tour of Italy.

Eugene V. Alessandroni, head of the Pennsylvania Grand Lodge of the order, said that 500 members and their families will go on the tour, visiting the principal Italian cities.

The tourists will arrive in Italy September 5 and will be greeted by the King at Pisa. At Rome, members of the order will have an opportunity to meet Mussolini and to have an audience with Pope Pius. They will return to the United States September 23.

Manila to Washington in 5 Days; Clipper Carries First Passenger

An argonaut of the air who was last Friday arrived in Washington last night.

The rate at which he traveled rivaled the maddest dreams of Jules Verne.

He was L. J. McCarty, aeronautical engineer with the Glenn S. Martin Co. of Baltimore, builders of the famous China Clipper ship and her sister craft, the Hawaiian Clipper.

McCarty, a Baltimorean, was the first official passenger on the long trans-Pacific hop from the Philippines to the United States. He drank his coffee in a Manila Hotel Friday, then boarded the Hawaiian Clipper, and Tuesday left her when she swooped to a graceful landing at the airport in Alameda, Calif.

"New commercial worlds are being pioneered by the route of the China and the Hawaiian Clippers," asserted McCarty last night, as he stepped from the plane that brought him from Detroit, and kissed his blond wife.

"Merchants and businessmen in the Far East are looking forward to the regular service, which lops more than a week off the time they might spend on the fastest ocean liners.

"Good will and commerical enterprise are being built by the great sky ships that dwarf the spaces and distances."

Part of the time the giant of the air was roaring high above the Pacific, McCarty sat at the controls. He went to the Philippines last spring to supervise the progress of the airline.

Passenger travel on the sky clippers will soon be as popular as travel on the Pacific liners, McCarty said.

"The Orient and the Western world will thus be more quickly, more closely knit together," observed McCarty, young, swarthy and well muscled.

"The time is fast coming when space and distance no longer will be barriers to trade—thanks to airlines and airlanes."

Hazen to Open Legion Session In Talk Tonight

Eight-Division Parade Will Be Feature of District Department Fete.

District Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen will welcome the delegates at the opening session today at 8:30 p. m. of the eighteenth annual convention of the department of the District of Columbia American Legion, at the Mayflower Hotel. Department Commander Joseph J. Malloy will respond. The convention will end Saturday night with a reception to the newly elected department commander and his staff and a supper dance in the ballroom.

The event will be preceded by an eight-division parade, which will start promptly at 7:15 p. m. from John Marshall place and Pennsylvania avenue, with Col. J. M. Wainwright, commanding officer at Fort Myer, as grand marshal, and Ray L. Zwinglas as American Legion marshal. The route will be west on Pennsylvania avenue to Thirteenth street, north on Thirteenth street to K, west on K street to Connecticut avenue, turning right into M, from Connecticut avenue to Seventeenth street, where it will disband.

The reviewing stand will be located on the south side of K street between Seventeenth street and Connecticut avenue.

After the parade, legionnaires and guests will assemble in the ballroom of the Mayflower Hotel, where at 8:30 p. m. the colors will be advanced under the direction of Richard A. Viancour and will be massed by Fort Stevens Post Drum and Bugle Corps, led by the American Legion Guard of Honor.

Guests will be introduced by Commander Malloy, followed by the principal address of the evening by Assistant Secretary of Commerce J. Monroe Johnson, a pioneer legionnaire. Commander Malloy will then introduce the visiting department commanders, with a response by Deputy Comdr. Charles Houck, jr., of Maryland.

The judges of the parade will be Alexander Morris, assistant leader, U. S. Navy Band; Paul Leman, director of Catholic University Band, and Merlin Crawford, of the National Symphony Orchestra, for the musical organizations. For the marching units and floats the judges will include Gen. Frank T. Hines, Administrator of Veterans Affairs; George W. Offutt, chairman of the Alcohol Beverage Control Board, and Watson B. Miller, director of the National Rehabilitation Committee, American Legion.

The guests of the local legionnaires at the opening session tonight will include:

United States Senator William H. King, of Utah; Assistant Attorney General James W. Morris; Assistant Secretary of Commerce J. Monroe Johnson; Gen. Frank T. Hines; Public Printer A. E. Giegengack, a New York Legionnaire; District Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen, John W. Blacks, RFC; George W. Doll Show Prizes Won by Two Boys At Janney Ground

Gibson Gay won the prize for the tiniest doll with his entry of twins, which were only one inch tall. Raymond Reed captured the blue ribbon for the most unique doll, a colored mammy and her child made from corn shucks.

Other winners at the contest, in which 50 dolls were entered, were Irene Stewart, whose entry was judged the most original; Marie Couch, whose doll had the most complete wardrobe, and Lorraine Salley, who had given her doll the most loving care. Lorraine, who is 10, had had the doll ever since she was 1 year old and it looked like new.

After the contest the children from the Hillcrest Orphanage put on a puppet show. They had made the puppets themselves. Judges of the doll contest were Mrs. Miner Buell, Mrs. Joseph Gray and Mrs. Sollace Earle. The Janney Playground is under the supervision of Mrs. Lydia Gassman.

Kiwanis Club to Offer Children's Camp Shoes

Fifty pairs of camp shoes will be given the Children's Health Camp by the Kiwanis Club, it was announced yesterday.

Co-operation of the Hahn Shoe Co. has helped Kiwanians in making their donation. A representative of the club will visit the camp today and fit the children for shoes.

Mrs. Ernest R. Grant, managing director of the Tuberculosis Association, and other officials will be present when the shoes are presented.

Cars Injure Boy Cyclist, Pedestrian

D. C. Will Hold Inquest Today in Accident Death of Lad, 5.

Woman Driver Is Fined for Leaving Scene of Auto Mishap.

Three persons were injured in traffic accidents yesterday as police prepared evidence to be presented today at an inquest into the death of 5-year-old Ormond Douglas Knowlton. The boy was killed Tuesday when struck by a truck in front of his home at 1112 Fourteenth street northeast.

George Mockbee, 14, of 1128 Fourth street southwest, was treated at Casualty Hospital for cuts of his legs and arms after he was knocked from his bicycle on Anacostia parkway near the Eleventh street bridge.

He was taken to the hospital by Frank W. Edwards, 58, of 1629 U street southeast, driver of the car that struck the boy. Edwards was not held.

Stepping into the street from behind a parked truck, Heyman Klaner, 59, of 421 Sixth street northwest, sustained cuts to his head when struck by a car. He was treated at Emergency Hospital and released.

Robert Dumphy, 18, of 1509 Gallatin street northwest, suffered leg injuries when the motorcycle he was riding struck a loading platform at First street and Rhode Island avenue northwest. He was taken to Casualty Hospital. Doctors said his condition is not serious.

Fined $100.

Irene Whitfield, 24, of Syracuse, N. Y., was sentenced to pay a fine of $100 or spend 30 days in jail on a charge of leaving after colliding, and to pay $30 more or spend 30 days in jail on a charge of driving with no permit when arraigned before Judge Isaac R. Hitt in Traffic Court.

The charges were placed against the woman after the car she was driving allegedly struck two cars at Sixth and E streets northwest, Tuesday, ran up on the curb and struck two pedestrians. Police said she jumped out of the machine and fled.

The pedestrians, Kathleene Eady, 22, and Don Dobyns, 22, both of Oklahoma, were treated at Casualty Hospital for cuts and bruises. Miss Eady doctors said, may have a fracture of the leg.

John Smith, colored, 23, of 715 Lamont street northwest, was sentenced to pay a fine of $200 or spend 3 months in jail yesterday after he pleaded guilty to a reckless driving charge in Traffic Court. Smith is the first motorist to receive the maximum penalty under the amendment to the traffic act passed at the last session of Congress. He received an additional sentence of two months for leaving after colliding and one month for driving without a permit.

Six Persons Injured.

Judge Isaac R. Hitt imposed the heavy sentence on the man as a result of an accident which occurred at Eighth and T streets northwest, July 22. Smith's car collided with an automobile driven by Myer Glassman, of Baltimore. Six persons were injured in the crash.

Chosen District's Safest Driver

Merchant Will Represent Washington at Clinic of Nation's Motorists in New York August 31; Salesman Named 2d in A. A. A. Contest.

Thirty-two years of automobile driving without an accident or a parking ticket yesterday brought its reward when John Hunter, a merchant living at 7336 Fourteenth street northwest, was selected as Washington's safest driver by a committee headed by Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen.

The choice was made in the District Building at the request of the American Automobile Association, which will hold a traffic safety clinic in New York City on August 31, with the safest drivers from all the States and the District in attendance.

Clarence M. Woodworth, a sales representative, of 1923 Kearney street northeast, was named second in the A. A. A. contest and will also go to New York.

These two were picked from five leading candidates chosen from 15 finalists in a contest that drew 300 applicants. The other three candidates interviewed by the committee are Lorenzo Z. Kidder, Thomas H. Strohecker and Walter B. Lang.

Hunter, who is 57, estimated that he had driven 600,000 miles. He has never been arrested on a traffic charge or received a parking ticket.

Woodworth, 48, has driven an equal distance in the last 21 years, and likewise has no marks on his traffic record.

Other members of the committee that made the selection besides Hazen were Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police; William A. Van Duzer, director of traffic; Oscar Coolican, president of the Washington Automotive Trade Association, and George W. Offutt and Isaac Gans, A. A. A. directors.

Schrom Urged To Go on Leave To Build Health

Fire Chief Asks to Retire but Hazen Proposes Rest, Instead.

Fire Chief Charles E. Schrom was yesterday advised by Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen to take a three-months leave of absence in an effort to recover his health. He is suffering from high blood pressure.

Hazen says that Schrom wants to retire but the Commissioners have asked him to retain his post at least until he has tried a prolonged rest.

The fire chief will be given an examination tomorrow by the board of fire surgeons to determine accurately the seriousness of his illness, but it is not expected that he will ask for retirement before taking a leave of absence.

Schrom became chief of the fire department on February 7, 1934, following the death of George S. Watson. He is 64 years old.

He entered the department in 1891 and went through the customary stages of promotions. He was awarded a ribbon for his rescue work when the roof of the Knickerbocker Theater collapsed.

Missionary Back, Tells Adventures

Recounting experiences as a Seventh Day Adventist missionary in the interior of India, Elder J. B. Carter, on a visit to the United States, Tuesday was at the home of friends at 6 Roanoke avenue, Takoma Park, Md.

Elder Carter told of inhabiting a hut in the interior which Indian priests told him was possessed of the devil, and of his acquaintance with an old native woman who told him she was "slapped off her feet" by the devil as she peeked into the hut to see how he was faring with the spirits.

With the exception of an old man who had run away, everyone who had lived in the hut had died, according to the missionary, who said that when the old native woman told her story the natives accepted Christianity as a more powerful element than the devils whom they had worshipped through fear.

Fluffie Ruffles, the almost notorious French poodle, was in a ruffled mood in her home at 2027 H street northwest yesterday after she had been deprived of her seven offsprings by a court order.

She was left alone because her mistress, Miss Helen E. Burch, had to get rid of the other poodles when Judge Robert E. Mattingly ruled "poodles are worse than fleas" in Police Court Tuesday after neighbors said the dogs were a nuisance.

Miss Burch said she would appeal the case. Court attaches said no appeal could be noted in such a case, as the charge—maintaining a nuisance—is only a misdemeanor.

Key Span Sag Not a Hazard, Officials Say

Settling May Be Due to Fill on Virginia Side, D. C. Aid Asserts.

$334,000 Allotment for Extra Span Expected to End Decline.

Several District and Federal officials yesterday admitted Key Bridge is saging on the Virginia side, but explained the condition is not dangerous and that it will be eliminated on completion of the arch which is to be added to the span. They stipulated that they must not be quoted.

One engineer asserted the settling has been noticeable ever since the bridge was opened in January, 1923. It was built under supervision of Army engineers, but was turned over to the District government for operation and maintenance.

It is possible, commented another Government expert, the bridge's weight plus the traffic load it bears has compressed the earth fill beneath, causing a gradual settling.

Secretary of Interior Harold L. Ickes approved this week a $334,000 allotment to add a span to Key Bridge and build that portion of the George Washington Memorial Parkway which will pass below. Officials contacted yesterday discounted reports the extra-span plan was adopted, rather than a tunnel scheme, primarily because alteration of the bridge would eliminate the sag.

One authority declared the supporting piers on the Virginia side are planted on boulders and that alterations incidential to construction of the new Memorial Parkway will result in the piers being shifted to solid rock for greater stability.

Plans for extension of the parkway above Key Bridge are being made by the engineering branch of the office of National Capital Parks and the Bureau of Public Roads. The latter bureau, using National Park Service funds, will supervise the project.

Postlude

Half the program was the work of American composers—one of them a Washingtonian, Mary Howe. And the other half, containing the "New World" Symphony, although written by the Bohemian, Anton Dvorak, was about America.

The Summer Concerts Orchestra, again under Fabien Sevitzky's baton, played with exceptional authority, considering that most of the members were giving first performances.

The works of the Americans showed decided individuality. The composition that seemed the exception to this was by the composer who has the greatest fame, Henry Hadley. His "Indian Ritualistic" Dance was a descriptive piece of the steady-beat-of-tom-tom type that is hardly exciting any more.

But the other three American works were different—as different, perhaps, as the personalities of the respective composers. The "Dirge," by Mary Howe, of Washington, proved a well-knit composition, in which the orchestra could build up a mournful mood far more powerful than mere sentimentality. Yet the effect was achieved quietly, without blatant drumming or forced climax.

The "Serenade in E," by Arthur Foote, for string instruments only, blended effectively the solidity of such music as Handel's, the warmth of a romantic composer, and the feeling for a tonality of a mildly modern one.

The "Serenade" has the texture of chamber music and the air of confidence around last night's performance seems altogether remarkable. It usually requires more time than the summer orchestra men have had for the preparation of a smooth result.

Otto Cesana's "Negro Heaven" is full of rhythm that might be stronger if the jazz in it were less adulterated. Mr. Cesana apparently tried to mold colorful and characteristic music into a definite form. But if he succeeded in scoring such a composition he should have prefaced the beginning theme with instructions for the orchestra men to cut loose.

Mr. Sevitzky last night made the popular Dvorak Symphony interesting for those who know it forward and backward, as well as for those who recognize only the "Goin' Home" stretch. That stretch, incidentally, seemed a little long last night. But that's the only criticism. The third and fourth movements were snappily played. To the applause at the end, Mr. Sevitzky responded with a repetition of the "Going Home" theme.

Mr. Sevitzky will be back on the conductor's stand tomorrow night to conduct a program that features a contralto soloist, Helen Stover. Miss Stover will sing "Ritorno Vincitor" from Verdi's "Aida." Sevitzky will conduct the orchestra in the "Scheherazade" suite by Rimski-Korsakov, Suite for Strings, by Corelli, and "Caprice Italienne," by Tchaikovski.

Takoma Park Girl, 14, Leaves Home; Elopement Feared

Dorothy May, 14-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred L. Manuel, disappaered yesterday morning from her Takoma Park Md.) home, where her father had confined her for a week. Her parents feared she had eloped with a former boarder.

The girl's father last night swore out a warrant for the arrest of the boarder, Daniel E. Snider, 20, after neighbors told him they saw her drive off in his car. He telephoned Ellicott City, Md., and learned that the couple had obtained a marriage license there July 24.

Dorothy May, who is a freshman at Takoma Park-Silver Spring High School, was forbidden to leave the house a week ago because she had been going out too much with Snider, a cab driver, her father said. She slipped out shortly before noon while her mother was in another part of the house.

Manuel said he did not know whether his daughter had been married. He said if she had he would have such a marriage annuled, because both his daughter and Snider are under age.

Virginian Pleads Guilty in Forgery

Cecil Good, 30, of Ballston, Va., pleaded guilty and was held under $5,000 bond for the grand jury yesterday when he was arraigned before United States Commissioner Needham C. Turnage charged with forging 70 money order blanks totaling more than $3,000.

Good was arrested Tuesday by Arlington County detectives after postal inspectors completed investigation of the case begun in July when 75 money order blanks were reported missing from a postoffice branch at Oraville, Md., where Good was formerly employed.

The man was traced through his description furnished by employes of postoffice stations here and in nearby Maryland and Virginia where he attempted to cash the orders.

Hadley Beats Nats by 11-7 For Yanks

By Shirley Povich.
Sports Editor of The Post.

Yankee Stadium, New York, Aug. 12.—The reaction that everybody had been looking for set in on the Senators here today, and the team that has been outslugging the slugging Yankees during the past two days was outslugged itself. The Yanks won the third and final game of the satisfactory series by a score of 11-7.

Bump Hadley and Jake Powell, who escaped from the Washington team in the firm's moments of distress, were the chief maltreaters of their old buddies today. Hadley went the route for the league leaders, to cop his eleventh victory of the year. He had 10 hits whacked out of him and was a little wobbly on his pins at the end, but he finished.

Powell, making a return to the Yankee line-up, smote a long home run in the fourth inning that shoved the Nats on their downfall. It was the principal biff of a four-run Yankee rally from which the Senators never recovered.

Earl Whitehill began the pitching argument, but was showered by hits and water before the day was over. Earl lasted until most of the fifth inning was over, and retired after Joe DiMaggio belted a long double to center to feature a three-run Yankee rally, which, at the time, gave the Yanks a 9-2 lead.

Sid Cohen finished the ball game. He was harder to hit than Whitehill. Lou Gehrig punched out twice, under Sidney's persuasion, but he was hit hard enough to have two runs wrung out of him at odd moments late in the game.

It was neck and neck until half the game had ticked away. The Yanks picked up two counters off Earl in the third, during a moment of wildness which saw him throw a wild pitch and walk DiMaggio. But Washington countered with a run in the fourth, when the Messrs. Stone and Reynolds doubled in succession.

Bluege Hits Homer.

That was about the end of the Washington threat. The Yanks, paced by Hadley, who singled, and Powell, who homered, scored four times in the fourth, and came back lustily with three more in the fifth.

Washington was picking up a run here and there from Bump, but he never permitted them to get too enthusiastic. Oswald Bluege hit his first home run of the year in the eighth, a pretentious drive into the left field pews.

The Nats went down fighting, as usual. In the ninth inning Chapman led off with a walk and then Selkirk unaccountably dropped Lewis' fly. It started a three-run rally that was consummated with hits by Reynolds and Kress.

Jockey Pete Walls Dies When Hit by Baseball

By the Associated Press.

Saratoga Springs, N. Y., Aug. 12. Peter Walls, former jockey who became a trainer and conditioned horses to run in his wife's name, met with a fatal accident during a baseball game at the recreation field here this morning. Walls, 32 years of age, was struck on the head by a deflected ball while running into second base. He continued in the game, apparently unhurt, but collapsed later while resting. Rushed to the Saratoga Hospital, he died shortly before noon.

To all those in the game and those who witnessed the accident, it seemed a very trivial one. Walls seemed perfectly all right and nothing more was thought of the incident until his sudden collapse. Walls had singled to get on first base, reached second and during a play where the second baseman received a throw to catch Walls off the bag the accident occurred. The second baseman said the ball struck the heel of his glove, struck his head lightly and then deflected to Walls' head without seeming to have much force.

It was reported from the hospital that a ruptured blood vessel developed and that it must have taken at least 15 minutes before the blood coagulated.

Walls is survived by his wife, Evelyn, a sister and brother. He was from Greenpoint, Brooklyn. He began riding for James Fitzsimmons, with 1932 his last big year as a jockey. He won the Futurity at Belmont astride Kerry Patch. He has trained the past few seasons. At the time of his death, he and his wife had one horse, the plater Evening Hour.

Cards, Outhit, 14-5, Defeat Cubs, 5-3

Chicago Pushed Down to 2d Place; 2 Homers Aid to St. Louis.

By the Associated Press.

St. Louis, Aug. 12.—The pitching combination of Larry French and Clay Bryant held the St. Louis Cardinals to five hits today, but two of them were home runs that sent the Chicago Cubs down to second place in defeat, 5 to 3.

Chicago, led by Frank Demaree with four hits and Ken O'Dea with three, failed lamentably to take advantage of 14 safeties off Si Johnson, formerly of Cincinnati and Toronto, making his first start for St. Louis.

Hambletonian Annexed by Rosalind

By Orlo Robertson.

Goshen, N. Y., Aug. 12 (AP).—Rosalind, the story-book filly, carved out a sensational victory on Good Time Park's triangular track in the eleventh Hambletonian today.

Flying the silks of 21-year-old Gibson White, of Lexington, and driven by his gray-haired father, Rosalin won trotting's richest stake in straight heats and record time before the largest crowd in Hambletonian history—estimated close to 45,000.

She stepped the first mile in 2:01¼ and then reeled off the second heat in 2:02¼ to erase from the books Greyhound's mark of 2:02¼ and 2:02¾ made last year.

Not once did the filly, which got her name from Shakespeare's "As You Like It," leave the issue in doubt. She trotted to the front soon after the start of each heat and breezed home to take the winner's share of the purse of $35,643.33, amounting to $19,269.11 and justify the support in the betting which sent her to the post a slight choice over W. N. Reynolds' Ed Lasater of Winston-Salem, N. C.

Two Lengths in Front.

At the end of the first brush, White had Rosalind two lengths in front of Brownie Hanover from Lawrence B. Sheppard's Hanover (Pa.) farm. In the second the daughter of Scotland held a three-length margin over Ed Lasater, also trained by the 63-year-old White and driven by Sep Palin of Indianapolis.

Today's victory climaxed an idea conceived by the elder White two years ago when his son was seriously ill. Knowing the boy's interest in horses, he made him a present of a yearling with the hopes the horse would do much to return his son's health.

Gibson named the filly Rosalind. The idea worked, and today the lanky son climbed the steps of the judges' stand to receive from E. Roland Harriman the trophy after cooperaitng with his dad in bringing the filly to the peak of her career for the Buggywhip Derby. Cheers rang from the multitude, while the eyes of many who knew the story behind the victory were filled with moisture as young White said:

There was little to choose in the betting between Rosalind and Ed Lasater, the pair which had split the two dress rehearsals.

When it came to the competition, however, there was no contest. Ed Lasater wound up sixth in the first heat after being carried wide at the first turn and then breaking into a gallop near the half-mile post.

Palin brought the Reynolds colt up fast in the final heat, however, but it got him no better than third money in the final standings, as Henry Thomas placed Brownie Hanover fourth in the second mile after forcing Rosalind to her fastest time in the initial heat.

Bridges in Form, Tigers Win, 7 to 4

Cleveland, Aug. 12 (AP).—Tommy Bridges took his fourth straight victory over the Indians today as the Tigers won, 7 to 4.

It ran his season's total to 15 wins, but Hal Trosky nicked him for a home run in the seventh, with the bases empty. It was the Tribe first baseman's thirty-fourth long distance clout of the year.

An Indian rally in the ninth halted after Billy Sullivan's double had netted two runs.

Medica Bests Japan's Ace For Mark

Sensational Sprint Wins; U. S. Gets 400-Meter, Women's Dive Titles.

By the Associated Press.

Medica scored a sensational victory over the Japanese menace in the 400-meter free style championship, passing Shumpei Uto 20 meters from home to win by one length of his long arms in Olympic record-making time of 4:44.5.

Thirteen-year-old Margie dived like a blond angel to beat out her teammate, Katherine Rawls, in the springboard event after the Florida mite appeared to have the title in her grasp.

With Miss Rawls second and Mrs. Dorothy Poynton Hill, of Los Angeles third, America swept the top places in the second diving event in as many days, duplicating the blanket finish by Dick Degener, Marshall Wayne and Al Greene in the men's springboard event.

At the end of the fifth struggle in the Olympic tank America held three gold medals, Japan two and Hungary and Holland one each. Furthermore, the men held a 2-point lead over Japan in the fight for team honors, 38 to 36, while the girls led Holland, 20 to 17½.

What made America's and Margie's triumphs all the more noteworthy was the magnificent manner in which each responded under pressure. Neither was supposed to win, but nobody could have told it when they saw defeat staring them in the eye.

Medica, who had only barely recovered from a chest cold, trailed the fleeting little Uto a full length when they turned into the final 100 meters. Probably no one among the 20,000 in the stadium except Medica thought he had any hope of overtaking the Tokyo terror.

But when they hit the final turn, 50 meters from home, the Washington star had reduced the deficit to half a length and gained still more with his powerful deep-water kick off the wall.

Down they came over the final stretch, Medica's long, steady strokes slowly and surely narrowing the gap despite Uto's desperate sprint while the crowd was yelling like maniacs.

Second Defeat for Japs.

Twenty meters before the goal they were even for an instant. Then Medica inched ahead and the race was over. The Seattle Seal's time lopped one second off the new Olympic record made by Uto two days ago.

It was the second straight defeat for the Japanese in a race they thought they had in the bag. Uto was clocked in 4:45.6, Shozo Makino his teammates, 4:48.1, and then came Ralph Flanagan, of Miami, fourth in 4:52.7.

The circumstances surrounded Miss Gestring's victory were not quite so demonstrative, but they were almost as equally thrilling. Dead silence hung over the crowd as the slender, superbly poised youngster stood on the board and prepared to make her final optional dive.

She was 0.13 of a point behind Miss Rawls at that stage and needed to score a brilliant 15.07 to tie for the championship. The difficulty getting a score like that from seven hard-boiled judges from as many

Five U. S. Boxers Advance, One Is Defeated in Olympic Bouts

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, Aug. 12.—Four United States boxers today joined Jackie Wilson, of Cleveland, in the quarter-finals of the Olympic boxing championships, as Arthur Oliver, Chicago heavyweight, was eliminated.

In today's second round bouts, Louis Laurie, Cleveland flyweight, beat Berghansen, of Norway; Andy Scrivani, Chicago lightweight, outpointed Dewinter, of Belgium; Jimmy Clark, middleweight, from Jamestown, N. Y., defeated Ahlberg, of Finland, and Ted Kara, Cleveland featherweight, won on points from Seeberg, of Estonia.

Oliver, who drew a bye in the first round was beaten and eliminated in the second by Tandberg, of Sweden. Two other Americans, Carl Vinciquerra, of Omaha, Nebr., light-heavyweight, and Chester Rutecki, Chicago welterweight, had previously been eliminated in the first round.

Laurie, first of the Americans to go into the quarter-finals today, scored a smashing victory over Berghansen. The American started fast, landing long lefts to the chin, but the Norwegian came back near the end of the round and pummeled Laurie with short hooks to the body.

Laurie floored his rival for a count of two in the second with a series of hard blows to the face and kept up a fast pace in the third, but though he had the Norwegian groggy at the finish, he could not put him away.

Scrivani's victory came after one of the bloodiest fights of the tournament. Both fighters were swinging wildly, but the American gained an advantage in the second round when he closed Dewinter's right eye with a stiff jab. Again in the third round, Scrivani landed on this eye, opening a bad cut which spouted blood for the rest of the fight.

Clark won the closest fight of the day from Ahlberg mainly because of his ability to score at long range. The Finn carried the fighting to Clark all the way and had the better of the battle whenever they got in close, but the American boxed well and kept out of range, while landing his long punches.

Clark was warned by the referee for holding in the second round. The referee's decision in his favor was unpopular with the crowd of 15,000 that jammed Deutschland Hall.

A formal protest by the British Olympic committee today reinstated Shrimpton, English middleweight, who was disqualified yesterday after knocking out Chinkuiti, of China, for not stepping far enough out of a clinch before landing the knockout punch.

Gabler's Hit Wins For Giants in 12th

Brooklyn, Aug. 12 (AP).—Young Gabby Gabler smashed out a triple with two mates on base today to break up a 12-inning thriller and give himself and the New York Giants a 2-to-1 victory over the luckless Dodgers.

For 11 innings Gabler and Van Mungo pitched scoreless ball, the latter holding the New Yorkers to five hits. After Gabby drove in the winning runs, the Dodgers threatened to tie it up in their half of the twelfth, but Carl Hubbell came to Gabler's assistance and pulled the game out of the fire.

100-Meter Record Equaled by Owens

Bochum, Germany, Aug. 12 (AP).—Jesse Owens, star of the United States Olympic track team, tonight equaled the world 100-meter dash record of 10.3 but disappointed 8,000 spectators by broad-jumping only 7.02 meters (23 feet ⅝ inch) and losing to Wilhelm Leichum, of Germany, who jumped 7.25 meters (23 feet 9 7-16 inches) in an international track meet.

Flashing Olympic speed despite his third straight night of barnstorming, Jesse outraced two Germans, Gerd Hornberger and Erich Borghmeyer by two and three yards in the 100. Bunta Suzuki, of Japan, was fourth.

Glenn Cunningham, of Lawrence, Kans., runner-up in the Olympic mile, won the 1,500 meters in 4:00.2. He was a stride ahead of Friedrich Schaumburg, of Germany.

Berlin, Aug. 12 (AP).—Holding their opponents to three points in the second half after a hard battle in the first, the United States basketball team today conquered the Philippines, 56-23, in the quarter-final round of the Olympic basketball tournament.

With Francis Johnson and Joe Fortenberry, of McPherson, Kans., scoring 21 and 18 points, respectively, the Americans dashed away from the islanders in the second period.

Brownell Takes Class A Low Net Honors at Indian Spring.

By Dave Herman.

Firing a 67, 4 under par, Bob Barnett, red-haired Chevy Chase professional, tied the competitive course record at Indian Spring Country Club yesterday and showed the way to a field of 75 golfers from Baltimore, Frederick and Washington in the 18-hole tournament sponsored by the Maryland State Golf Association.

Barnett won first prize easily among the pros, going out in 32, 3 under, and returning in 35. Needing a 4 on the last hole to break the course mark, held by Miller Stevinson, George Voigt and Ralph Beach, Barnett finished with a 5, after missing the emerald target with his second shot.

Brownell Has Low Net.

Bobby Brownell, of Manor, District junior champion, had the situation well in hand for nine holes, turning in 34, but he finished 6, 4, 5, going over par on each of the last three holes, winding up with a 72. Little Bobby's five handicap, however, gave him a clear claim to first low net prize in Class A. A. W. Reid, of Sparrows Point, with 78—9—69; Jack Palmer, of Beaver Dam, with 75—6—69, and J. G. Riley, of Manor, with 78—9—69, tied for second low net.

Harry Pitt, Manor ace, back in the groove, scored a 72, after going out in 34.

A. H. Younquist, of Indian Spring, with 78, won first low gross in Class B, and L. K. Elliott, of the same club, the low net prize with 83—14—69. J. T. O'Hara, of Hillendale, sporting a 20 handicap, shot the greatest round of his life, an 84, to win the first low net in Class C, going away.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—PARSCOUT, $7.20, $5.20, $4.40; DURWRACK, $14.40, $7.40; TONIANNA, $8.60.

PARSCOUT was permitted to settle into her best stride and was not hurried along during the first 3 furlongs, responded gamely to urging when reaching the stretch and, wearing down the leaders, won going away. DURWRACK, prominent from the outset and hard ridden all the way, fought it out in game fashion to the close. TONIANNA, a forward factor all the way, saved ground in the stretch and held on gamely. PANTHER CREEK was in the forefront throughout. PRAIRIE PRINCE closed ground in the stretch run. MARY ELISE, well placed after working her way out of close quarters, weakened in the closing drive. AMHURST unseated his rider several times while at the post. He was in close quarters early and was unable to reach the leaders. GRIMALDI was knocked back badly nearing the far turn. CROONERETTE was unable to reach the leaders.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:03. Off at 3:06. Winner, Mrs. William Irvine's ch. f. (3), by Bright Knight—Addie Ree. Trained by William Irvine. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:23 1-5, 0:46 4-5, 1:12 3-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—JESSIE V. L., $8.00, $4.60, $3.60; ITSIE BITSIE, $4.60, $3.60; SANDY BOY, $5.00.

JESSIE V. L. was never far from the leaders, wore down ITSIE BITSIE when reaching the stretch and outlasted the latter to the end. ITSIE BITSIE displayed speed from the start and fought it out willingly when challenged. SANDY BOY, badly blocked and forced to take up after leaving the backstretch, closed a good gap when settled back in stride again. DISCOURSE came with a belated rush after trailing early. TOP SHELL closed ground in the last quarter mile. TUG BOAT, well placed, tired. HANDY BAGGAGE had early speed. BROWBEATEN never was prominent. ARGOAN was outrun.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good. Won ridden out; place driving. Went to post at 3:37. Off at 3:40½. Winner, Mrs. A. R. Smith's b. g. (3), by Challenger II—Florence Kranz. Trained by O. L. Foster. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:23 3-5, 0:47 3-5, 1:13.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—THE REW, $11.20, $5.20, $3.80; BULLFINCH, $4.40, $3.40; INTRODUCTORY, $5.40.

THE REW went to the front immediately, withstood determined early opposition from PALERMIAN, disposed of her and held away to the close. BULLFINCH, hard ridden to gain a contending position, responded gamely to urging when reaching the stretch and, wearing down the leaders, won going away. INTRODUCTORY worked his way up steadily and closed with good courage. PALERMIAN, hard ridden in an effort to keep pace with the winner early, weakened in the drive. ROCKRIM, on the outside all the way, was unable to make up any ground. LITTLE TRYST went evenly. BLACK GIRL had brief early speed, faltered after going 3 furlongs. MISS OTIS was outrun. MATE TEA was far back all the way. LADY GRANDACE was outrun.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,100; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good for all but Gift of Roses. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:12. Off at 4:17½. Winner, A. L. Dolan's ch. m. (5), by Stimulus—Enslaved. Trained by B. Evans. Value to winner, $750; second, $200; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:23 1-5, 0:47, 1:12.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—WEE WINK, $12.20, $6.00, $4.40; LADDIE STONE, $4.60, $3.20; FREDERICK, $5.20.

WEE WINK was rated along for the first 3 furlongs, began moving up on the outside thereafter and, closing with a rush, was up inside the last 10 yards. LADDIE STONE took command at once, opened up a good lead, but bore out after rounding the far turn, recovered gamely though unable to stave off the bid of the winner. FREDERICK, carried wide into the stretch, finished with good courage. CYNWYD moved up on the inside to take the lead when LADDIE STONE bore out and only weakened in the closing strides. CYNWYD closed with belated bid in the last furlong. CHARACTER showed good speed for the first half mile, tiring thereafter. STAROGAN never was prominent. GIFT OF ROSES dwelt when the start came and was never prominent.

FIFTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won ridden out; place driving. Went to post at 4:49. Off at 4:55. Winner, Miss A. Doris' b. m. (6), by Flying Ebony—Muriel von Der. Trained by H. L. Campbell. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:24, 0:48 3-5, 1:13 3-5, 1:40 2-5, 1:46 4-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—FLYING DERE, $13.00, $5.80, $3.20; AMERICAN PRINCE, $12.80, $4.60; STONE MARTIN, $2.60.

FLYING DERE, never far from the lead and holding to a position on the outside of STONE MARTIN, disposed of the latter for the lead and hard ridden through the stretch, drew out steadily. AMERICAN PRINCE, reserved early, closed in determined fashion in the last five sixteenths. STONE MARTIN, hard ridden to get to the front, was never able to gain much of an advantage and on the inside throughout, faltered in the last quarter mile. WHIPPERCRACKER never was able to enter into serious contention. BYE BYE MARY, unruly at the post, stopped after displaying brief early speed.

SIXTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $2,000 added. The Bostonian Handicap. For 3-year-olds and upward, fillies and mares. Start good. Won eased up; place driving. Went to post at 5:25. Off at 5:26½. Winner, H. C. McGehee's b. f. (3), by Bright Knight—Fair Phantom. Trained by E. B. McGehee. Net value to winner, $1,870; second, $300; third, $200; fourth, $100. Time, 0:24, 0:47 2-5, 1:12 3-5, 1:37 4-5, 1:42 4-5.

*Belair Stud and Wheatley Stable entry.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—FAIR KNIGHTESS, $5.40, $3.00, $2.80; REMINDING (entry), $3.00, $3.40; VICARESS (entry), $3.40.

FAIR KNIGHTESS gained a slight lead in the run to the first turn, withstood determined early opposition from FICKLE CHANCE, drew into a good lead and was being eased up at the end. REMINDING, a trailer early, came through on the inside at the stretch turn and finished resolutely under punishment. VICARESS, well placed throughout, was unable to make up any ground under punishment. FICKLE CHANCE, in close chase of the pace early, faltered in the stretch run. EBONY LADY, on the outside throughout, never was a factor. HELEN was unable to keep up.

SEVENTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 5:57. Off at 5:59. Winner, C. V. Whitney's gr. c. (3), by Royal Minstrel—Fluffy. Trained by W. V. Mullen. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:23 3-5, 0:47 3-5, 1:13 2-5, 1:38 3-5, 1:44 3-5.

WINTER SPORT	(Seabo)	105	2	2	1h	1nk	8	8	8	5.00

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SINGER'S FOLLY, $11.60, $5.00, $3.60; SHANSI, $4.00, $3.20; MISS DIGNITY, $5.20.

SINGER'S FOLLY, a trailer for the first half mile, moved up steadily in the last three furlongs and closing with a rush under vigorous handling, was up in the closing stride. SHANSI, restrained early, went to the front when called upon, opened up a good lead, Longden becoming overconfident and failing to notice the winner. MISS DIGNITY moved up willingly when called upon and closed gamely. SIR ROLLIE was unable to threaten. OFFICE BOY closed some ground. JOY FLAG and WINTER SPORT were much used in racing with each other and stopped badly in the last three furlongs.

EIGHTH RACE—One and three-sixteenths miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 6:30. Off at once. Winner, H. H. Graves' b. g. SKY LAD took command at once, was rated along in front under steadying restraint and hard ridden at the end, lasted to stave off ZEMBLA. The latter, as usual slow to begin, came with a rush on the outside and just failed to be up in time. THATCH, in close pursuit of the pace early, was unable to improve his position when called upon. REGIS PLAY, well placed, was unable to make up any ground under pressure. IDLE MONEY tired. BLAST, under stout restraint early, moved up gamely nearing the far turn, ran into close quarters and Longden had to take up. He was unable to recover.

Miller Furniture Beats Heurich, 6 to 3, in Industrial Play-Off

Clark Shines In Contest At Ellipse

Scoring all of their runs in the first four innings, Miller Furniture Co. defeated Heurich Brewers, 6 to 3, yesterday at West Ellipse to take a one-game lead in the play-off series of the Industrial League of The Washington Post Baseball Association.

While Porter, hurling for Miller, held the Brewers to eight widely scattered hits, his mates, notably Roy Clark, first-sacker, backed him up with some smart and timely swatting.

Clark emerged as the hero. All told he was responsible for four runs. In the first inning he singled to score two men, and in the third his triple brought in another run. He scored once himself.

The two teams will clash at 4:30 p. m. at the East Ellipse today. Yesterday's victory was the first for Miller in nine games against Heurich.

Takoma Park Girls Capture Meet Title

Takoma Park Playground captured its first conference meet in history yesterday when its girls carried off honors in the northern conference games at Raymond Playground. Another dark horse, Phillips, trailed Takoma by but 2½ points.

It was a surprising day in many ways. There were 12 teams entered and all scored. Barnard and Truesdell, summer grounds and not considered capable of making the showing they did, topped some of the favorites in scoring. To climax the day, the meet was not decided until the final event.

This Morning . . .

With Shirley Povich.

New York, Aug. 12.

Three hundred-odd, and I mean odd, New York golfers are currently engaged in probably the most futile competition of 'em all—certainly the silliest. I refer to the hole-in-one championship which one of the metropolitan dailies is sponsoring as a promotion stunt. What it proves, except that 300 golfers can take themselves that seriously, this department doesn't know and doesn't even suspect unless it is proof that life's little stupidities are still with us.

POVICH.

But every golfer in the tournament is a bona fide hole-in-one shooter. At some time during the past year they have seen one of their shots off the tee disappear into the cup. Now they are meeting for the hole-in-one championship.

Grimly they step up to the tee on a short hole, take their five allotted shots and step down again, oblivious to the absurdity of their attempts. If nothing else, the hope that beats eternally is displayed here, together with a fine disregard for the humor of their situation.

Because anybody who has ever swung a golf club knows that a hole-in-one is essentially a stroke of luck rather than a stroke of a golf club. It is not the mark of a good golfer, but of a lucky one. Bobby Jones never made a hole-in-one in his life, which ought to prove something. Yet there are dozens of Joe Dokes and Joe Zilches throughout the land who don't know a chip shot from a hack saw who have a half-dozen aces to their credit.

But the hole-in-one has lost caste in the last few years. They are now so common that newspapers don't bother to print the announcements half the time unless they occur in an important tournament. But a dozen years ago, before golf became the game of the masses, a hole-in-one was indeed a rarity and really sump'n.

The procedure then was very well defined. A fellow would make a hole-in-one then rush downtown to the newspaper office, break in breathlessly, and with a smile from ear to ear, report his feat. You could spot 'em from a distance.

At least I could. My desk in the old sports department faced the door and I was the reception committee for every visitor. From that point of vantage I made and won a hundred mental bets with myself on the apparent business of these visitors even before they stated their cases.

If, as I say, he was slightly out of breath and walked in smiling with a pleased look on his face that resembled the expression of the cat which swallowed the canary, then I knew he was the newly confirmed author of one of two things: He either had come in to report the hole-in-one that he made, or to proudly announce that he was the daddy of a newly born eight-pound man child, who, incidentally, was always a chip off the old block.

At that, baseball has its parallel to golf's hole-in-one. I mean the no-hit game. Walter Johnson, in 20 years of pitching, was able to hurl only one no-hit game in his career, yet there are a half-dozen former big leaguers, punks in comparison, who have no-hitters to their credit.

Even Bobby Burke pitched a no-hit game against the Red Sox five years ago last week. And Burke never was good enough to win a regular job with the Nats. There was a fellow named Charley Robertson who not only shut out the Tigers without a hit while pitching for the White Sox in the early 20's, but he didn't let a man reach first base. It was the perfect game. Yet Robertson was never much account as a pitcher, either before or afterward.

Walter Johnson himself will tell you that he has pitched a dozen better games than the no-hit game he pitched against the Red Sox in Boston in 1920. And, moreover, he was beaten in those games. But he didn't have the luck on those days that he did when he got by with his no-hitter, even though he had more stuff on the ball, which doesn't seem to count.

But lest this piece be misconstrued as a sour grapes affair by a guy who has never made a hole-in-one, let me hasten to say that I have, indeed, a hole-in-one to my credit. Ya oughta seen it. I'm the only golfer who ever made a hole-in-one in spite of myself. It was a topped brassie shot that rolled through a trap, ducked into a creek, hit a rock, bounced on the green and trickled into the cup for the hole-in-one to end all holes-in-one as well as this piece.

U. S. Captures Pair of Swim Crowns

Miss Ryan's father arrived from America just in time to watch her swim a dead heat with Zilpha Grant, of Great Britain, on their initial leg. Her teammates went on to nip the Britons by one-tenth of a second, 4:47.1 to 4:47.2, but they didn't display much promise to beat the brilliant Dutch four in Friday's final.

With Willy Denouden and Rita Mastenbroeck fairly flying on the last two legs the Holland girls not only beat the American's times by nine seconds but came within one-tenth of a second of the Olympic record made in Los Angeles in 1932 by the United States quartet.

Sets World Mark.

America's men and women backstrokers stayed strongly in the swim in their specialty or peculiarity Adolf Kiefer, of Chicago, looked like a dead cinch for the men's 100-meter crown as he won the first of five preliminary heats in 1:06.9, breaking George Kojac's Olympic mark of 1:08.2 that had stood since 1928 and also lowering the listed world record. Masaji Kiyokawa, of Japan, different countries may be gathered from the fact that up to that point only seven dives had been over 15 points. Two of them belonged to Margie.

So the snub-nosed, freckled-face little "baby" member of the team chose one of the toughest dives of them all—a one and one-half back somersault—and shot the works. She scarcely stirred the water when she hit. When her head bobbed out of the water she was the Olympic champion. They gave her 16 points for the dive, surpassed during the day only by her own 16.20 made on a marvelous forward somersault with a half twist.

"I don't think I ever will be so happy again," she said excitedly. "I couldn't believe it when they announced my last score."

The first to grab Margie and pump her hand at the edge of the pool was Miss Rawls, who showed no trace of the disappointment she must have felt. Margie, herself, didn't know whether to laugh or cry.

All in all, Margie clinched the gold medal by scoring an aggregate of 89.28 points to 88.35 for Miss Rawls and 82.36 for Mrs. Hill. She trailed the Floridan by 13/100 of a point at the end of the three compulsory dives, passed her on the first optional event, scoring 16.20, but dropped right back where she started when she received 14.40 for one and one-half running somersault.

Margie is next to the youngest member of the American squad, senior by four months to Elizabeth who raced Kiefer right to the finish in 1:07.2 appeared his only serious rival.

Managoff and Cox Wrestle Tonight

Feature Pair Promise to Abandon Rough Work in Stadium Match.

Brought back by special arrangement only and a radical revision of their schedule, Managoff and Cox have mutually agreed to do away with as much unnecessary roughness as possible and treat the fans to some real wrestling class and science.

The clashing of Cox and Managoff climaxes great build-ups enjoyed by both locally, both having proven themselves popular box office attractions since their introduction here.

A classy preliminary cast, four matches limited to 30 minutes each, has been arranged and brings together Kino Garibaldi vs. Frank Judson, Ole Anderson vs. Joe Dusek, Al Billings vs. Henri Piers and Cliff Olson vs. Firpo Wilcox.

Bankers Title To National Savings

The National Savings & Trust Co. won the 1936 Bankers League championship yesterday the easiest way. They stood by and watched the W. B. Hibbs Co. defeat American Security & Trust Co., 11 to 1, Hibbs' victory giving National Savings the undisputed league lead.

In winning the championship, National Savings & Trust Co. won 17 straight games and 18 out of 19 for the season.

Wheat Climbs With Exports From Canada

Advance of 2½ Cents Per Bushels Carries Corn Higher.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Aug. 12.—Stimulated by large export purchasing of Canadian wheat and by renewal of decidedly unfavorable harvest weather in Europe, Chicago wheat values soared 2½ cents today. Some estimates were around 2,000,000 bushels of wheat in Canada had been bought today for export, on top of 1,000,000 bushels taken yesterday.

Wheat closed firm at virtually the day's top level, 1⅞@2½ cents above yesterday's finish. Stocks Advance in Late Trading With Favorable Trade Reports; Wheat Strong.

New York, Aug. 12.—This was a day of advancing prices and rising activity in nearly all financial markets. Bonds hardened, Government issues recovering from their weakness of the previous day. After a draggy forenoon the stock market moved forward with a good deal of determination. Turnover in stocks was around 1,250,000 shares. September wheat closed 2¾ cents higher at 110½ cents a bushel.

Stocks had their first nudge from the whisky section, where a concerted buying movement began and brought a good deal of activity and strength for a while. When that began to wear off, the steel division came forward vigorously and much of the recent recession was wiped out. Steel common climbed more than a point above its morning quotation and nearly 2 points above the previous close.

Railroad stocks also improved and the strength in the equipment group was even more noticeable. Pullman sold at a new high price. Others rose 1 to nearly 2 points. The case for the steels, rails and equipments is too strongly supported by current evidence of good business for the market to grow too heavy on vague fears that the improvement may not be maintained. In the excitement Steel preferred turned active and strong.

Mostly Higher.

Copper shares rivaled the steels for attention, but the motors failed to get anywhere. In the general afternoon recovery the motors hardened a little, but were not particularly popular. Auburn weakened. Merchandising stocks and sugars moved ahead with confidence.

A handful of stocks made up the early interest. Briggs Manufacturing added more than 2 points to yesterday's rise of 2 points. Curtis Publishing was active, the common advancing 2 points and the preferred reaching the best price in several years. Allied Chemical proved to be a hot spot for shorts and jumped 9 points to offset a 7-point break yesterday. General Outdoor Advertising continued in demand. Poor and Simmons were good numbers.

Small earnings sent Pillsbury to a new price. Gulf States Steel broke 8 points on two sales. Public utilities sailed off and on waiting for a favorable tide. Higher prices were the role for the rubbers, oils, amusements, foods and mail orders.

Business Credit.

Money markets were unchanged and showed no sign of uneasiness over the coming higher reserve requirements. Meanwhile the business recovery seems to be in or near the sector of expanding credit, the phase of liquidation of frozen loans apparently having passed. Commercial paper outstanding last month increased, although the ordinary loans, for business and speculation, changed little.

The increase in volume of commercial paper from $168,700,000 in June to $187,600,000 in July is really more important as an indicator of business demands for credit than is the change in the commercial loans of banks, because the commercial paper market is still the cheapest place for business to borrow money and hence will feel the demand for money first. Moreover, commercial paper money must be applied to commercial purposes under the rules under which it is raised. The July volume of merchants paper exceeded by several millions the peak level reached in May, and was the highest of any month since October, 1934. Part of the increase in July was seasonal. At present grain-milling concerns are seeking commercial paper credit.

Midweek news was mildly sustaining to prices. The Iron Age, reviewing the steel industry, noted a point drop in the operating rate, but predicted no particular decline for the next month and a half. The demand for steel from the railroads, farm implement companies and miscellaneous sources has been a cause of considerable surprise to all observers this summer, and is doing much to allay fears of an appreciable setback in business this autumn on election tremors.

Election Influence.

Research into the records of former election years indicates that most of the nervousness has been poorly founded. The stock market and the pace of business usually have carried on through election summers and autumns at the same rate as that which prevailed before the campaigns got under way. Wall street believes that great relief would be felt over the election of Landon and that over the next year or so business would be all the better for it, even if in that time brakes could not be clamped hard enough to stop the momentum of New Deal economic policies.

Success for the New Deal would be extremely distasteful to most industries and financial interests, although some of the speculative element would see in that, or pretend to, a promise of an inflationary boom. Many professional stock market followers are torn between their desire for a quick market profit on an inflationary scare and their instincts for sound monetary and economic policies.

Withdrawals.

Institutions here which hold the deposits of thousands of banks in other cities have studied these accounts closely in the past few days to see what, if anything, their correspondents would have to draw to increase their reserves by the required 50 per cent, effective after the close of business Saturday. No withdrawals have been noticed yet and no volume of them is expected before next week. Few bank officers feel that the maximum withdrawals for the purpose of transferring funds to bolster Federal Reserve accounts will exceed 10 per cent of such balances and many do not look for an exodus of any such proportions, which would mean, roughly, $200,000,000.

Increase.

Visiting bankers from Boston, Pittsburgh, Philadelphia and Chicago, questioned as to what they may check out of bank accounts here, say that it all depends upon checks drawn against them. The country bank, which has no banks to draw upon it to replenish reserves, but which may have to draw upon its city friends, is the axle upon which the whole thing revolves. So far as the New York banks are concerned, they still will have such large excess funds after the increase in reserve requirements that they are not bothering to make any preparation for out-of-town withdrawals. Curiously enough, balances of out-of-town banks have shown a sudden increase in the past two days, according to three institutions which do a considerable business with interior banks.

First to Report.

The Alton Railroad, as usual, was the first road to report its monthly earnings. A considerable increase in gross revenues in July gave the road a small operating income, as compared with a large deficit in the same month of a year ago. After payment of charges the deficit was far smaller than that of last year. Bulls on the railroad stocks feel confident that the July earnings statements will prove to be cheerful enough to shove further forward the prices of the shares and second grade bonds.

Goodrich Net Up 75 Per Cent For Half Year

By the Associated Press.

New York, Aug. 12.—B. F. Goodrich Co., manufacturer of tires and other rubber products with principal plants at Akron, Ohio, reported today net sales of $65,994,521 in the first half compared with $54,887,666 a year ago.

Net income, before provision for the Federal undistributed profits tax, amounted to $2,727,606, equal after preferred dividend requirements to $1.59 a common share year ago. The increase in net exceeds 75 per cent. The preferred is in arrears.

R. Hoe & Co.

R. Hoe & Co., manufacturers of newspaper printing presses and allied equipment, with plants in New York and Dunellen, N. J., in a preliminary statement for three months ended June 30, the third quarter of the fiscal year, showed consolidated earnings after interest and depreciation, of $32,314 against a loss of $58,958 for the corresponding period last year. For the third quarter and for the full nine months, the statement said, interest charges were fully covered, with consolidated nine months' earnings of $5,962 against loss of $338,253 for the like period last year.

N. Y. Central Railroad Co.

New York Central Railroad Co. reported June net income after fixed charges of $1,045,726, equal to 21 cents a share on the capital stock against deficit of $736,815 after charges for June, 1935. For the six months ended June 30 net income was $360,864 or 7 cents a share against deficit of $4,160,013 in the like period last year.

Am. Safety Razor Corporation.

The American Safety Razor Corporation reports consolidated net earnings after provision for depreciation, reserves and normal taxes (domestic and foreign) for the second quarter ending June 30, 1936, of $300,715.40, against $268,451.69, for the same period of 1935; equal to $1.72 per share on 174,800 shares outstanding in 1936 against $1.53 per share on 174,800 share outstanding in 1935.

Greyhound Corporation.

Greyhound Corporation, operator of a national bus transportation system, with headquarters in Chicago, reported for the first-half net income of $1,426,086, before undistributed profits tax, equal after preferred dividends, to $2.25 a share. This compares with $1,434,610, or $2.48 a share in the like 1935 period.

Trust Holdings Shift to Tools And Chemicals

Industrials Continue to Form Bulk of Portfolios.

New York, Aug. 12.—Mid-year reports of general management type investment trusts revealed increases in net assets, in most cases narrower than the rise of the stock averages, during the first six months of 1936, says the Standard Statistics Co. today. The smaller appreciation in portfolio values was, of course, partly due to the stabilizing effect of relatively small holdings of cash and bonds.

No uniformity of trend in the matter of switching from one industry to another could be discerned from comparison of portfolio changes. The most general inclination, however, was toward larger investments in chemical, machine tool, equipment and utility stocks. Most companies maintained a heavily invested position.

As in the first quarter, portfolio changes during the second quarter of the year were the result of miscellaneous switching operations. No important changes were made. Individual units showed differences of opinion regarding the relative attractiveness of utilities and rails as against industrials, but the latter continued to constitute by far the bulk of investment company funds.

The progress of the investigation of investment trusts by the SEC, ordered by Congress last year, as revealed by public hearings thus far provides only hints as to the eventual recommendations to be contained in the final report of the commission. This report is expected to be ready for the consideration of Congress next January.

Electricity Output 14.3% Over Year Ago

New York, Aug. 12 (AP).—Electric power production in the week ended August 8, as reported by the Edison Electric Institute, amounted to 2,079,149,000 kilowatt hours, compared with 2,079,137,000 kilowatt hours in the preceding week and 1,819,371,000 kilowatt hours in the same week last year. The percentage gain of 1935 was 14.3 per cent.

All major geographical regions participated in the upturn over last year. Percentage changes follow: New England, 15.9; Middle Atlantic, 14.0; central industrial, 16.5; west central, 7.4; Southern States, 15.5; Rocky Mountain, 15.0, and Pacific Coast, 10.6.

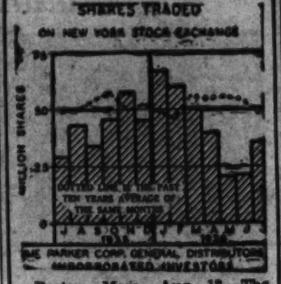
Security Trading Renews Activity



Boston, Mass., Aug. 12.—The stock market recently broke into new high graund and activity in July showed considerable increase over the past two months. The number of shares traded on the New York Stock Exchange the first seven months of this year nearly doubled the same 1935 months, although below the average of the past ten years by 16 per cent.

Curb Irregular; Trend Is Lower

New York, Aug. 12 (AP).—Stocks in the Curb Market shuffled irregularly lower today. Withdrawal of support early in the session sent specialty shares lower and unseated a number of comparatively inactive stocks. From then on inertia ruled and issues see-sawed in narrow trading ranges.

New Jersey Zinc closed a point lower at 83 as did Montreal Light, Heat & Power at 31. Offerings of Pan-American Airways resulted in a setback of ⅞ at 56; Northern States Power "A" was forced off ¾ at 33¼, and Universal Consolidated Oil fell 2 at 20. Singer reacted 7 points to close at 333.

Gulf Oil and Lake Shore Mines led a counter movement, each gaining 1 point at 88¾ and 56½, respectively. Pennsylvania salt pushed forward 3½ to 138 and Sunshine mining moved up ¾ to 15½. Most changes, however, were confined to ½ point or less.

Copper Sales In 7 Months Twice Year Ago

New York, Aug. 12.—Domestic copper sales for the first seven months of 1936 probably exceeded 500,000 tons, an increase of 113 per cent above the 235,000 tons sold in the same period of 1935, according to a report issued today on the copper mining industry by Poor's Industry and Investment Surveys.

Sales expanded substantially during the second quarter, amounting to 191,000 tons as contrasted with 75,000 tons in the second quarter of 1935. A tremendous gain was registered in July, when sales probably exceeded the record monthly volume of 158,000 tons registered in April of this year. This contrasts with the July, 1935, sales of 71,400 tons.

"Price advances in April and July were responsible for the sharp sales increases during these months," says the report. "And prospects point strongly to further consumption gains along with the broadening of the recovery movement. Increased needs for equipment by the utility industry brought on by record electric output, expanding operations in the electrical equipment and household industries, and the upward trend in building activity should all continue to be reflected in expanding copper sales."

Anthracite Shipments.

Shipmens of anthracite for July, as reported to the Anthracite Institute, amounted to 3,345,309 net tons. This is a decrease, as compared with shipments during the preceding month of June, of 170,589 net tons, or 4.85 per cent, and when compared with July, 1935, shows an increase of 313,322 net tons, or 10.33 per cent.

$16,000,000 Nickel Plate Notes Offered

Ten-Year 4 Per Cent Issue Is Priced at 100 and Interest.

An issue of $16,000,000 ten-year 4 per cent collateral trust notes of the New York, Chicago and St. Louis Railroad Co. is being offered today by a group of investment banking houses headed by Edward B. Smith & Co. The notes are priced at 100 per cent and accrued interest.

The railroad, commonly known as the Nickel Plate, will use the proceeds to refund outstanding obligations of $15,327,091, which include $10,889,568 owed to the Reconstruction Finance Corporation; $3,199,415 due the Railroad Credit Corporation and $1,258,107 notes of the Nickel Plate Development Co.

The notes are redeemable at the option of the company, as a whole or in any part on any date prior to maturity on 30 days' notice at the following prices: to August 1, 1938, at 103; thereafter to August 1, 1940, at 102; thereafter to August 1, 1942, at 101½; thereafter to August 1, 1944, at 101; thereafter to maturity, at 100.

Associated with Edward B. Smith & Co. are: Lee Higginson Corporation, The First Boston Corporation, Brown Harriman & Co., Inc., Mellon Securities Corporation, Blyth & Co., Inc. and Lazard Freres & Co., Inc.

The Federal Diary

By Samuel Lubell.

"Government Night."

August 21 will be "Government Night" at the Watergate, with Lieut. Charles Benter, of the Navy Band; Capt. Taylor Branson, of the Marine Band, and Walter Bauer, of the Department of Agriculture orchestra, conducting the symphony concert.

The selections to be played have not been decided as yet, but tentative plans call for three compositions conducted by Bauer, two by Benter and the finale by Branson.

The fame of the Navy and Marine bands is Nation-wide and both Benter and Branson are well-known in Washington music circles. In 1919 Benter, fresh from his post as bandmaster on the U. S. S. Connecticut, organized the Navy Band. Since then he has been its only leader.

He took the band on the air in 1921, has composed a number of original marches and has conducted seven concert tours of the country. Two years ago the band had an offspring—the Navy's symphony orchestra.

Branson has been with the Marine Band for 38 years, learning to play the violin under Capt. William S. Sandelmann, when he was the band's leader. After several years as assistant conductor, he was made the band leader in 1927. Like Benter, Branson has composed a number of original marches, has conducted concert tours and given radio broadcasts.

Although not a professional musician—he earns his living as an economist—Bauer's life has been marked by a series of flirtations with the musical muse. A native of Germany, he was born into a music-loving family, his two sisters and two brothers also playing instruments. Walter being the second youngest had to content himself with learning the oboe.

As a lad of 10 he led a neighborhood boys' band, and as a college youth the student orchestra at Leipzig University. Undecided as to his future, Bauer studied both music and economics at the university. As with most Germans of his generation, the decision as to his future was molded more by freeing-moving economic and social forces than personal desires. The inflation that brought ruin to German musicians, swung Bauer over to economics.

Thereafter his career was divided between economics and music. While on the staff of the Institute of Agriculture, in Rome, he organized an orchestra and chorus, incidentally marrying one of the singers. When at Paris with the American agricultural foreign service he spent his leisure hours playing the oboe, viola and flute, which he studied in 1929. When he returned to this country in 1934 he was urged to take over the Agriculture Orchestra. He did well and within two years has come to be known as one of the finest musical directors in the city.

McComas Resigns.

Virgil McComas, World War veteran and clerk in the military intelligence division of the War Department, has resigned his post because of ill health. McComas served throughout the war as a corporal. He was wounded in the Meuse-Argonne offensive. He has been with the Department since 1923.

A testimonial dinner honoring George H. Wakefield retiring as principal clerk of the transportation branch of the Army Finance office, will be held next Thursday night at the Hotel Hamilton. Wakefield joined the War Department as a war emergency employe in 1898. He was given a permanent Civil Service appointment in the office of the Depot Quartermaster, at Chicago, in 1900.

He was transferred to this city in 1917.

Wives and husbands, brothers and sisters, fathers and mothers, and any other members of the "immediate family" that you can think of, have been made eligible for associate membership in the Athletic and Recreational Association of the Department of Agriculture by amendment to the ARA constitution. Associate members will not be allowed vote at the annual meeting.

Our sympathy is extended to Frank B. Bourn, chief of the division of supplies and accounts in the War Department, whose wife died suddenly Tuesday morning. The funeral will take place at 2:30 this afternoon at the residence, 3777 Oliver street.

Congressional candidates throughout the country are being sounded out by A. F. G. E. members as to their views on a proposal to create a civil service board of appeals to prevent unjust discharge and demotions of Government workers.

At present the employe has no appeal against an administrative action save to the administrative authorities. Under the old Labor Relations Board act, Government workers could bring their cases before the board, but even this safety valve has been stopped up under the new law. Demand for such a board of appeals is certain to be one of the major planks in the legislative program to be drafted at the Detroit convention.

Capt. Thomas Bruns has called a meeting of the organization committee of the A. F. G. E. for Friday, at 8 p. m., at Room 200, Civil Service Commission.

TUESDAY, AUGUST 18, 1936—
ADAM A. WESCHLER & SON, Auctioneers.

By virtue of a deed of trust recorded in Liber No. 6848, folio 227, et seq., one of the land records of the District of Columbia, and at the request of party secured thereby, the undersigned trustees will offer for sale by public auction, in front of premises, on TUESDAY, THE EIGHTEENTH DAY OF AUGUST, 1936, AT FOUR O'CLOCK P. M., the following described property in the District of Columbia, to-wit: Lot 163 in Clarence F. Norment's subdivision of lots in Block 23, "Columbia Heights," and part of Block 16 in Todd and Brown's Subdivision of part of "Mount Pleasant" and "Pleasant Plains," as per plat of said Norment's subdivision recorded in Liber No. 44, folio 120, of the Records of the office of the surveyor of the District of Columbia. Subject to the 30-foot building restriction line on Thirteenth street, as established by proceedings in District Court Case No. 1551, in the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia. Subject to covenants of record. Note: At the date hereof the above-described land is assessed on the books of the Assessor of the District of Columbia for taxation purposes as Lot 163 in Square 2850. Subject to the right of redemption by the makers of the aforesaid deed of trust, their heirs and assigns, within a period of sixty days from the date of sale, not excluding Sundays and holidays, as provided in said deed of trust.

TERMS OF SALE—One-third of the purchase-money to be paid in cash, balance in equal installments, represented by promissory notes of purchaser payable in one and two years, with interest at 5 per cent per annum from day of sale, payable semi-annually, secured by first deed of trust upon property sold, or all cash, at option of purchaser. A deposit of $300.00 required of purchaser at sale. Examination of title, conveyancing, recording, revenue stamps and notarial fees at cost of purchaser. Terms to be complied with within ten days from expiration of redemption period, otherwise trustees reserve the right to resell property at risk and cost of defaulting purchaser, after five days advertisement of such resale in some newspaper published in Washington, D. C., or deposit may be forfeited, or without forfeiting deposit trustees may avail themselves of any legal or equitable rights against defaulting purchaser.

Embassy Halts Spain's Seizure Of U. S. Plants

Madrid, Aug 12 (AP).—Action by the American Embassy, it was asserted here tonight, has resulted in an end to indiscriminate seizure of American properties.

More than 30 firms had applied to the embassy for protection and a number reported their properties had been attached in varying degrees by unauthorized government-Socialist party committees.

Commercial Attache Albert Nufer has issued certificates which have been posted on the doors of American establishments requesting that the property be respected. Confiscation, the bulletins advised, could be effected only on written order from the government and if provision for prompt payment was made.

The embassy also was negotiating for return or indemnification for property already confiscated. Return of several automobiles to American owners already has been effected through diplomatic channels.

Among the property seized by the unauthorized committees were 100 machines owned by the Madrid branch of the Singer Sewing Machine Co. The Capital Movie Theater, rented by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, was taken over and now is being operated by labor groups.

[French, German, Dutch and Austrain governments advised their nationals to evacuate the capital as soon as possible, the United Press reported. France informed her nationals that Thursday's night train to Valencia probably will be their last chance to embark on a French warship. Those remaining, stay at their own risk, the French Embassy announced.

(The American Embassy confirmed that the Madrid government is attempting to arrange with rebel leaders at Granada for suspension of hostilities to permit evacuation of foreigners. Results of the negotiations were not known. It was announced that 63 Americans still are at the embassy and that 119 Americans are remaining at their hmes in Madrid.—Editor's note.]

Lacks Neutrality Law.

By the Associated Press.

Without legal means to enforce American neutrality, the Administration last night depended upon its "scrupulous" nonintervention pronouncement to preserve a strictly "hands-off" policy in the United States toward the Spanish revolt.

Official elaboratoin was withheld on the State Department's announcement that this Government would maintain "a completely impartial" attitude toward the disturbance. But well-informed sources ascribed the action to two outstanding motives:

1. To prevent as far as possible any material American aid from reaching either side in the Spanish hostilities lest it involve this country in possible complications abroad.
2. To refrain from interfering with the efforts of other nations to localize the Spanish civil war.

Will Replace Battleships.

While State Department officials waited to gauge the effect of its statement of policy, the Navy announced that the battleship Oklahoma would be withdrawn from its rescue operations in Spanish waters to resume its normal schedule and that it would be replaced by two destroyers.

The change is to be effected within a week or ten days. The Oklahoma was assigned to the revolutionary area on July 21 to evacuate Americans desiring to leave. The heavy cruiser Quincy, engaged in similar work, probably also will be relieved shortly to undergo previously scheduled tests.

The State Department revealed that the French government informally was keeping Washington closely informed of its efforts to create an international neutrality bloc in the Spanish crisis. It was stated officially, however, that this Government had not been invited to co-operate in the undertaking and that its views on the subject had neither been asked nor given.

Are Proceeding Slowly.

Although the present emergency marks the second time in less than a year that the United States has been called upon to take a neutral stand, the Spanish situation presents such an entirely new set of circumstances that officials admittedly are proceeding slowly.

Some observers expected that President Roosevelt might elaborate on present policies with reference to Spain in his address Friday night at Chautauqua, N. Y., on foreign affairs, but there was no information of this.

Unlike the sitution presented by the Italy-Ethiopian War, the American neutrality act is not applicable to the Spanish civil strife. That law specifically covers only wars between or among nations, compelling the Chief Executive in such cases to invoke embargoes on shipments of arms, ammunition and implements of war to each belligerent.

Rebels Open Fire on Madrid

(The Seville insurgent radio station announced the rebel Moroccan army from the south and Gen. Emilio Mola's rebel forces from the north established contact 60 miles east of Badajoz.

(The reports said the town, capital of Badajoz Province, was surrounded and was expected to fall momentarily.)

The newspaper Diario Noticias here published a report from Tangier, which quoted Muley Sliman, Moroccan leader, as saying that about 10,000 native soldiers had been ferried across the Straits of Gibraltar to join the insurgents.

Sliman, the dispatch said, asserted all went voluntarily to fight the Madrid Socialist government. The chieftain said it was too early to disclose what conditions Gen. Franco had offered for Moroccan support, but, he was quoted, "the rights, living conditions and population of the riff zone will improve after Franco's victory."

(The Seville broadcast accused the Madrid government of "hiding the truth on the military situation." It claimed an ever-widening grasp by the rebel forces and complete domination of nine provinces—Galicia, Leon, Estremaduras, Castille, Andalusia, Jaen, Aragaon, Navarre and Asturias—except the cities of Malaga and Badajoz.

(Absolute order has been restored to those provinces, it said, and peasants and laborers have gone back to work.)

Gen. Oswaldo Capaz, acting commander in Spanish Morocco during the absence of Gen. Franco, the dispatch from Tangier said, has become increasingly critical of the international governing committee. He was reported to have demanded immediate recognition as a belligerent in the Spanish civil war, but not as a rebel, and to have pronounced as insufficient the committee's decision to expel the loyal Spanish navy from Tangier.

Aid by French To Madrid Held Pact Obstacle

Blum Cabinet Tolerating Funds and Enlistment, Opposition Says.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, Aug. 12.—Opposition leaders charged tonight France's tolerance of aid to the Madrid Socialist Government was obstructing the proposed international neutrality pact.

They blamed specifically raising of private funds and enlistment of Frenchmen as volunteers to aid the Spanish government as slowing progress toward a non-intervention agreement.

Twelve powers, including Italy, have approved the French formula but Rome, making reservations and suggestions, limited itself to adhesion "in principle."

Germany Silent.

Germany has shown similar reluctance and so far has failed to reply formally to the French suggestions.

The French council of ministers was summoned to meet tomorrow on the neutrality problem after informed sources said, the Blum government set August 17 as the absolute deadline for completing the agreement.

Officials, however, declined to comment on the possibility France would permit arms shipments to Spain should Paris, Rome and Berlin fail to reach a final agreement by the end of the week.

The government formally denied a widely published report that "contrary to the cabinet's decision (to ban shipments to Spain of all war materials) French planes were sent to Spain in recent days."

Charges Plane Delivery.

The aviation editor of L'Intransigeant asserted 13 French pursuit planes and 6 bombing planes were delivered to Barcelona August 8, the afternoon before the cabinet meeting at which the decision was taken.

Newest subscribers to the neutrality proposal were Sweden, Norway and Denmark. They informed the French foreign office today, appending notes to their agreement announcing they already had acted to ban export of war materials to Spanish Morocco.

A French dispatch from Gibraltar tonight quoted travelers arriving from Ceuta, Spanish Morocco, as saying 25 German aviators had enrolled in the Spanish foreign legion under the rebel commander, Gen. Francisco Franco, and it was believed they brought airplanes with them.

Japan Is Ready To Send Army Into Mongolia

By the Associated Press.

Shanghai, China, Aug. 12.—Reinforced Japanese troops were poised for a fresh invasion of Suiyuan province in Inner Mongolia—adding new tension to strained relations between Japan and China, it was reported here tonight.

Although a spokesman for the Nippon soldiers at Tiensten denied contemplated participation in events in Inner Mongolia, vernacular newspapers here asserted two companies from Jehol, in Manchukuo, had joined the Japanese forces in Dolonor.

The Tienstin spokesman for the Japanese attributed the strife in Mongolia to banditry, admitted the situation was complicated, but asserted he was unaaware whether two Japanese regiments had departed toward Changpei. The Japanese-Manchukuo military pact, he asserted, does not provide for military assistance beyond the Manchukuo border.

Unless the Nanking (Central) government is able by diplomatic means to prevent further asserted infringements of China's sovereignty by Japan, these observers agreed, armed conflict must sooner of later result.
